

Special Senses

Special Sensors Stations

Introduction: This activity is designed to be used with students who are challenged in understanding the interconnectedness of the sensory system. Students can learn about the general function of the sensory system and how it is connected to the brain. They can also learn about the different types of sensory receptors and how they are distributed throughout the body. This activity can be used as a review or as a way to introduce the topic of the sensory system.

Objectives: By the end of this activity, students should be able to:

- 1. Identify the different types of sensory receptors and their functions.
- 2. Explain how the sensory system is connected to the brain.
- 3. Describe the different types of sensory receptors and how they are distributed throughout the body.

Materials:

- 1. Paper plates
- 2. Colored paper
- 3. Scissors
- 4. Glue
- 5. Markers
- 6. Stencils

Procedure:

1. Divide the class into groups of four or five students.
2. Give each group a paper plate and a set of colored paper.
3. Have each group cut out the different types of sensory receptors from the colored paper.
4. Have each group glue the different types of sensory receptors onto the paper plate.
5. Have each group label the different types of sensory receptors on the paper plate.
6. Have each group present their paper plate to the class.

Assessment: The teacher can assess the students' understanding of the sensory system by asking them to explain the different types of sensory receptors and how they are distributed throughout the body.

Extension: This activity can be extended by having students create a sensory map of their own body. They can use the same materials as in the first activity and label the different parts of their body with the names of the sensory receptors.

BLIND SPOT

As you travel down either highway, your car is right on the edge of your eyes filled with photoreceptors that convert light into information that the brain can understand. This is how you see.

When light enters the eye, it strikes retina and converts to an image. There are no photoreceptors between the optic nerve and the blind spot (the area where the optic nerve leaves the eye). So, between the eye and the brain, there is no information that can be sent back to the brain. This is the blind spot.

Diagram illustrating the blind spot. Light enters the eye, hits the retina, and is converted into an image. The optic nerve leaves the eye at the blind spot, where there are no photoreceptors. The brain receives information from the retina, but not from the blind spot.

BLIND SPOT

The blind spot is the area of your visual field that your brain has excluded. It is a blind spot because you cannot see it. It is located in the center of your visual field, directly in front of you. ANATOMY OF THE TONGUE

The diagram illustrates the anatomy of the tongue, showing the dorsal view (left) and the ventral view (right). The dorsal view labels the epiglottis, pharynx, larynx, trachea, and bronchi. The ventral view labels the epiglottis, pharynx, larynx, trachea, and bronchi.

TASTE & SMELL

The Nose

1. Explain a system of different receptors that you receive why 2 flavors of chocolate, 4 flavors of bananas, 3 flavors of lemons
2. Describe all various important odors
3. Explain a system how they smell they smell how reduced a sense of smell, better, worse. For each smell have one of what food the smell was, how reduced smell how more increased smell with reason. For each smell have one of how the smell, reduced it would be, why of their smell, but not necessarily the same
4. Explain a system how you smell, how it would be of their reduced smell, better, worse, why of their smell, but not necessarily the same
