

MOTHERHOOD DURING COVID-19

How to Balance Your Child's Nutrition

How can I protect my newborn from Covid-19?

To protect your baby's immunity, breastfeeding provides the best immunisation, including antibodies in breast milk, within the first six months of birth. Breast milk contains all the best antibodies. Breast milk also provides the best protection to support your baby's immunity and health. The immune system of newborns is still developing and needs support to fight off infections and strengthen immune responses.

By breastfeeding your baby, you are providing the best immunisation before and after, including your baby's antibodies. Breast milk is the best source of nutrition for your baby. It is also the best source of immunisation for your baby's immune system. Breast milk is the best source of nutrition for your baby. It is also the best source of immunisation for your baby's immune system.

How long should I breastfeed my child for it to be beneficial?

Some mothers may choose to breastfeed for a few weeks when their baby is born, or breastfeed for up to 12 months. Breastfeeding for as long as possible is the best for your baby. Breastfeeding for up to 12 months is the best for your baby. Breastfeeding for up to 12 months is the best for your baby.

01 First Six Months

Your first breast milk, also known as colostrum, has a high concentration of antibodies and other immune properties that protect your newborn against diseases like diarrhoea, an infection or respiratory infections.

02 First Six Months

The American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) recommends exclusively breastfeeding the baby until they are at least 6 months old, as breast milk provides optimal nutrition for the baby for the first six months of life. Breast milk composition also changes with time to the baby's changing needs during the first six months.

03 Beyond Six Months

Beyond 6 months, breast milk alone will no longer be able to provide all the nutrition required for growth and development.

Your child's diet has to be supplemented with complementary foods like cereals or solids. Most babies start to show signs of weaning, usually around the sixth month, but mothers can introduce appropriate solids to infants at any time after 6 completed days and before the end of 6 completed months.

Health Protection Board (HPB) recommends breastfeeding for at least the first 6 months, and if possible to last until their infant is 2 years old, or for as long as mutually agreeable with it. Breast milk continues to be the best source of nutrition for your child.
