Abstract

Background: Legal cannabis is available in more than half of the United States. Health care professionals (HCPs) rarely give recommendations on dosing or safety of cannabis due to limits imposed by policy and lack of knowledge. Customer-facing cannabis dispensary staff, including clinicians (pharmacists, nurses, physician's assistants), communicate these recommendations in the absence of HCP recommendations. Little is known about how dispensary staff approach individuals with complex medical and psychiatric comorbidities. Using responses from a national survey, we describe how cannabis dispensary staff counsel customers with medical and psychiatric comorbidities on cannabis use and examine whether state-specific cannabis policy is associated with advice given to customers.

Methods: National, cross-sectional online survey study from February 13, 2020 to October 2, 2020 of dispensary staff at dispensaries that sell delta-9-tetrahydrocannabinol containing products. Measures include responses to survey questions about how they approach customers with medical and psychiatric comorbidities; state medicalization score (scale 0–100; higher score indicates more similarity to regulation of traditional pharmacies); legalized adult-use cannabis (yes/no). We conducted multiple mixed effects multivariable logistic regression analyses to understand relationships between state medicalization and dispensary employees' perspectives.

Results: Of 434 eligible respondents, most were budtenders (40%) or managers (32%), and a minority were clinicians (18%). State medicalization score was not associated with responses to most survey questions. It was associated with increased odds of encouraging customers with medical comorbidities to inform their traditional HCP of cannabis use (Odds ratio [OR]=1.2, 95% confidence interval [CI] 1.0–1.4,  $p=0.03$ ) and reduced odds of recommending cannabis for individuals with cannabis use disorder (CUD) (OR=0.8, 95% CI 0.7–1.0,  $p=0.04$ ). Working in a state with legalized adult-use cannabis was associated with recommending traditional health care instead of cannabis in those with serious mental illness (OR 2.2, 95% CI 1.1–4.7,  $p=0.04$ ). Less than half of respondents believed they had encountered CUD (49%), and over a quarter did not believe cannabis is addictive (26%).

Modernizing Crime Statistics National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Law and Justice, Committee on National Statistics, Panel on Modernizing the Nation's Crime Statistics, 2016-06-30 To derive statistics about crime to estimate its levels and trends assess its costs to and impacts on society and inform law enforcement approaches to prevent it a conceptual framework for defining and thinking about crime is virtually a prerequisite Developing and maintaining such a framework is no easy task because the mechanics of crime are ever evolving and shifting tied to shifts and development in technology society and legislation Interest in understanding crime surged in the 1920s which proved to be a pivotal decade for the collection of nationwide crime statistics Now established as a permanent agency the Census Bureau commissioned the drafting of a manual for preparing crime statistics intended for use by the police corrections departments and courts alike The new manual sought to solve a perennial problem by suggesting a standard taxonomy of crime Shortly after the Census Bureau issued its manual the International Association of Chiefs of Police in convention adopted a resolution to create a Committee on Uniform Crime Records to begin the process of describing what a national system of data on crimes known to the police might look like The key distinction between the rigorous classification proposed in this report and the classifications that have come before in U S crime statistics is that it is intended to partition the entirety of behaviors that could be considered criminal offenses into mutually exclusive categories Modernizing Crime Statistics Report 1 Defining and Classifying Crime assesses and makes recommendations for the development of a modern set of crime measures in the United States and the best means for obtaining them This first report develops a new classification of crime by weighing various perspectives on how crime should be defined and organized with the needs and demands of the full array of crime data users and stakeholders The Routledge International Handbook of Online Deviance Roderick S.
