Johnson, 2007-11-29 The biannual Formal Methods in Computer Aided Design conference FMCAD 2000 is the third in a series of conferences under that title devoted to the use of discrete mathematical methods for the analysis of computer hardware and so ware The work reported in this book describes the use of modeling languages and their associated automated analysis tools to specify and verify computing systems Functional verification has become one of the principal costs in a modern computer design effort In addition verification of circuit models timing power etc requires even more effort FMCAD provides a venue for academic and industrial researchers and practitioners to share their ideas and experiences of using discrete mathematical modeling and verification It is noted with interest by the conference chairmen how this area has grown from just a few people 15 years ago to a vibrant area of research development and deployment It is clear that these methods are helping reduce the cost of designing computing systems As an example of this potential cost reduction we have invited David Russino of Advanced Micro Devices Inc to describe his verification of floating point algorithms being used in AMD microprocessors The program includes 30 regular presentations selected from 63 submitted papers
