The Role of Traits in the Leadership Process Tasoh Toh, Kujiek Ruot, 2019 The cliché leaders are born not made and leaders are made not born have been on the social sphere of leadership for quite a while Is this a chicken egg dilemma Leadership generally has certain qualities that humans can point at acting as conspicuous factors to be emulated These qualities can either be innate or acquired This paper looks at the role of traits in the leadership process It focuses mainly on the trait theory distinguishing the desired and the not so admired ones in as far as leadership is a concern We also employ the great man theory to historically give flesh to where and how leadership has evolved to the 21st century Transformational charismatic leadership comes forth as the lottery winning mode to a sure way to a successful and productive form that leaders should have to deliver in this technologically advancing planet We touched on Narcissist and Machiavellian types of leadership but only as contrary examples to the recommended The paper is therefore a handy requirement for today's leaders A snapshot for those wishing to guide others in the visionary path of leadership Commitment passion empathy honesty integrity communication skills and decision making capabilities can be learned and used to better the leader follower relationship process The business world and other forms of social governance are out of the stagnation of the great man theory of leadership Flexibility in behavior actions and thought make the best of a leader

Leadership Processes and Follower Self-identity Robert G. Lord, Douglas J. Brown, 2003-09-12 Presenting a follower centered perspective on leadership this book focuses on followers as the direct determinant of leadership effects because it is generally through follower reactions and behaviors that leadership attempts succeed or fail Therefore leadership theory needs to be articulated with a theory of how followers create meaning from leadership acts and how this meaning helps followers self regulate in specific contexts In this book an attempt is made to develop such a theory maintaining that the central construct in this process is the self identity of followers In developing this theoretical perspective the authors draw heavily from several areas of research and theory The most critical constructs do not come directly from the leadership literature but from social and cognitive theory pertaining to follower s self identity self regulatory processes motivation values cognitions and emotions and perceptions of social justice Leaders may have profound effects on these aspects of followers and it is by analyzing such indirect follower mediated leadership effects that most ideas regarding leadership theory and practice are developed Due to its broad theoretical focus this book is relevant to a number of audiences The authors principal concern is with the development of leadership theory and the practice of leadership making the book relevant to audiences in management applied psychology and social psychology They have tried to clearly define key constructs and provide practical examples so that the book could be accessible to advanced undergraduate students However the diversity of the underlying theoretical literatures and the complexity of the framework developed also make the book appropriate for graduate courses in those disciplines and for readers with a professional interest in leadership theory or practice

Force For Change John P. Kotter, 2008-06-30 The critics who despair of the coming of imaginative charismatic leaders to replace the so called manipulative caretakers of American corporations don t tell us much about what leadership actually is or for that matter what management is either Now John P Kotter who focused on why we have a leadership crisis in The Leadership Factor shows here with compelling evidence what leadership really means today why it is rarely associated with larger than life charismatics precisely how it is different from management and yet why both good leadership and management are essential for business success especially for complex organizations operating in changing environments Leadership Kotter clearly demonstrates is for the most part not a god like figure transforming subordinates into superhumans but is in fact a process that creates change a process which often involves hundreds or even thousands of little acts of leadership orchestrated by people who have the profound insight to realize this Building on his landmark study of 15 successful general managers Kotter presents detailed accounts of how senior and middle managers in major corporations in close concert with colleagues and subordinates were able to create a leadership process that put into action hundreds of commonsense ideas and procedures that in combination with competent management produced extraordinary results This leadership turned NCR from a loser to a big winner in automated teller machines despite intense competition from IBM The same process at American Express and SAS helped businesses grow dramatically despite the fact that they were mature and commodity like Kotter also shows how leadership turned around operations at P produced huge business successes at PepsiCo ARCO and ConAgra and made the impossible occasionally happen at Digital Thousands of companies today are overmanaged and underled John Kotter concludes not because managers lack charisma but because far too few executives have a clear understanding of what leadership is and what it can accomplish Without such a vision even the most capable people have great difficulty trying to lead effectively and to create the cultures which will help others to lead
