Hassmiller,2006

OBJECTIVE In India TB kills more smokers than all types of cancer combined Substantial evidence links smoking and TB smokers are more susceptible to are spreading and dying from an infectious disease Research objectives are to estimate individual level increases in TB risks among smokers understand the underlying mechanisms by which smoking impacts TB risks estimate the impact of smoking on population level TB outcomes and to begin to investigate policy implications

METHODS A compartmental model is developed to represent key aspects of TB transmission and disease progression and smoking is introduced based on a review of the impact of smoking on lung function immune response and social contact patterns Individual level effects of smoking are constrained by estimates of the unconditional relative risks of being infected developing TB and dying from TB for smokers compared to never smokers estimated in a meta analysis The model is used to estimate the population level impact of smoking on TB outcomes and the effect of tobacco and TB control policies on projected TB outcomes

RESULTS Ever smokers are 1.7 95%CI 1.3 to 2.0 2.7 to 2.0 3.9 and 2.4 to 3.4 2 times more likely to be infected with M tuberculosis to develop TB and to die from TB respectively than never smokers It seems unlikely that these values could be produced unless smokers are more likely to become infected given exposure to M tuberculosis and to progress to disease given infection Translating these individual level effects to the population level when 29% of adults smoke the average in developing countries an estimated 60% of all incident TB disease 95%CI given uncertainty in TB dynamics 56 to 65% expected range given uncertainty in the underlying mechanisms 59 to 72% and 57% of TB deaths 52 to 62% 55 to 69% are attributable to smoking Among never smokers 42% of incident TB 36 to 48% 39 to 59% and 42% of TB mortality 36 to 48%

38 58% is attributable to smoking CONCLUSIONS Considering both the direct effects of smoking on individuals own health and the indirect effects of contagion smoking impacts population level TB outcomes substantially Fortunately smoking is an identifiable and modifiable risk factor Neglecting to control tobacco use could significantly offset strides made in TB control
