Le Point Jean:

French Arms Exports Lucie Béraud-Sudreau, 2020-03-25 From De Gaulle onwards France's strategic independence has been predicated on self sufficiency in modern weapons To achieve and maintain the requisite defence industrial base in the context of limited domestic orders Paris sought to promote the export of its arms During the Cold War this underpinned but was also an expression of France's determination to resist bipolar domination France offered customers around the world an alternative to reliance on one superpower or the other and in doing so it generated the revenue to support an extensive domestic arms industry The end of the Cold War ushered in fundamental changes however Western defence spending shrank and the global market was turned upside down While France's arms export policy was less affected by human rights concerns than other democracies it was not immune to pressures stemming from the consolidation of Europe's defence industrial base and the increased interest of the EU in regulating the arms trade This Adelphi book considers how France has responded to changing political and market circumstances in the way that it promotes and controls the export of weapons It examines the rationale for considering a liberal arms export policy as essential to French independence and the institutional arrangements that underpinned this It tracks the dramatic changes in the global arms market since 1990 in terms of demand and market competition and charts the response of the French government to these changes The book underlines how the French machinery of government as a directing force behind the defence industry has been resistant to the notion of export restraint even in the case of sales to authoritarian regimes However it argues that France now faces a dilemma over whether to continue with a long successful course or to moderate its independence through greater collaboration to bolster European integration and better compete globally

Arms Sales and Regional Stability The International Institute for Strategic Studies (IISS), 2023-04-28 The book considers the main arms exporting countries including China Russia and the US as well as several European states and the policies each employs in deciding advanced weapons sales to key regions of the world It examines whether such sales are inherently stabilising or de stabilising regarding regional security Regions reviewed in detail include the Middle East and the Indo Pacific Combat aircraft sales are a focus for the volume given both their practical and symbolic importance The volume focuses on the behaviour and policies of the main arms exporting nations since the end of the Cold War shifts in their arms export policies and the tensions that can emerge within or between countries over proposed arms sales It also considers the impact of countries that were previously only recipients of advanced weapons moving to develop their own defence industrial base

Drones and International Law Rebecca Mignot-Mahdavi, 2023-07-13 Through an analysis of the use of drones Rebecca Mignot Mahdavi explores the ways in which in the context of counterterrorism war technology and the law interact and reshape one another She demonstrates that drone programs are techno legal machineries that facilitate and accelerate the emergence of a new kind of warfare This new model of warfare is individualized and de materialized in the sense that it focuses on threat anticipation and thus consists in identifying dangerous figures individualized warfare rather than responding to acts of hostilities material warfare Revolving around threat anticipation drone wars endure over an extensive timeframe and geographical area to the extent that the use of drones may even be seen as appears to be the case for the United States as part of the normal functioning of the state with profound consequences for the international legal order
