Doctoral Education and the Faculty of the Future Ronald G. Ehrenberg,Charlotte V. Kuh,2011-05-02 American colleges and universities simultaneously face large numbers of faculty retirements and expanding enrollments Budget constraints have led colleges and universities to substitute part time and full time non tenure track faculty for tenure track faculty and the demand for faculty members will likely be high in the decade ahead This heightened demand is coming at a time when the share of American college graduates who go on for PhD study is far below its historic high The declining interest of American students in doctoral programs is due to many factors including long completion times low completion rates the high cost of doctoral education and the decline in the share of faculty positions that are tenured or on the tenure track In short doctoral education is in crisis because the impediments are many and the rewards are few students often choose instead to enroll in professional programs that result in more marketable credentials In Doctoral Education and the Faculty of the Future scientists social scientists academic administrators and policy makers describe their efforts to increase and improve the supply of future faculty They cover topics ranging from increasing undergraduate interest in doctoral study to improving the doctoral experience and the participation of underrepresented groups in doctoral education space is a commons simultaneously a sphere of human cooperation and negotiation and its product Understanding urban space as a commons means that the much sought after productivity of the city precedes rather than results from strategies of the state and capital This approach challenges assumptions of urbanization as capital driven an idea which resonates with a range of recent urban social movements from the Arab Spring and the Occupy movement to the Right to the City alliance However commons exist in a tense relationship with state and market both of which continually seek to exploit and control them Initiatives to create commons are welcomed and even facilitated by governments in order to re valorize urban space and lessen the impacts of economic restructuring while at the same time the creative and reproductive potential of the urban commons is undermined by continuing attempts to commodify them This volume examines these topics theoretically and empirically through a wide spectrum of international case studies providing perspectives from a variety of cities as diverse as Berlin Hyderabad and Seoul A wider discussion of commons in current scientific and activist literature from housing public space to urban infrastructure is explored through the lens of the urban condition Jacobs' Orchestra Monthly, 1927
