Global Agriculture and the American Farmer Kimberly Ann Elliott, 2017-06-27 The United States is one of the world s largest producers and exporters of a range of agricultural commodities and the largest provider of foreign assistance so U S policies have big effects on global food security and other global public goods linked to agriculture On the positive side of the ledger President Obama created the Feed the Future aid initiative to promote agricultural development in poorer countries as a tool to achieve the global goals of ending hunger and extreme poverty which are mostly rural But that generosity is undercut by U S support for farmers that distorts global markets and ignores negative spillovers for the rest of the world In this book Elliott focuses on three policy areas that are particularly damaging for developing countries traditional agricultural subsidy and trade policies that support the incomes of American farmers at the expense of farmers elsewhere the biofuels mandate which in its current form increases market volatility while doing little if anything to mitigate climate change and weak regulation of antibiotic use in livestock which contributes to the global spread of drug resistant super bugs While noting that broad reforms are needed to fix these problems Elliott also identifies practical steps that U S policymakers could take in the relatively short run to improve farm policies for American taxpayers and consumers as well as for the poor and vulnerable in developing countries Structural Transformation and Economic Development Banji

Common Agricultural Policy Johan F.M. Swinnen, 2015-07-30 After five years of debates consultations and negotiations the European institutions reached an agreement in 2013 on the Common Agricultural Policy CAP for the 2014-2020 period The outcome has major implications for the EU's budget and farmers' incomes but also for Europe's environment its contribution to global climate change and to food security in the EU and in the world. It was decided to spend more than 400 billion during the rest of the decade on the CAP. The official claims are that the new CAP will take better account of society's expectations and lead to far-reaching changes by making subsidies fairer and greener and making the CAP more efficient. It is also asserted that the CAP will play a key part in achieving the overall objective of promoting smart, sustainable and inclusive growth. However, there is significant scepticism about these claims and disappointment with the outcome of the decision making the first in which the European Parliament was involved under the co-decision procedure. In contrast to earlier reforms where more substantive changes were made to the CAP, the factors that induced the policy discussions in 2008-13 and those that influenced the decision making did not reinforce each other. On the contrary, they sometimes counteracted one another, yielding an imperfect storm as it were, resulting in more status quo and fewer changes. This book discusses the outcome of the decision making and the factors that influenced the policy choices and decisions. It brings together contributions from leading academics from various disciplines and policy makers and key participants in the process from the European Commission and the European Parliament.

Economic Report on Africa 2013 United Nations. Economic Commission for Africa, 2013. This publication assesses long-term trends in Africa's growth, analyses the factors behind the recent growth momentum and provides global perspectives on the key challenges to be addressed which are critical to unleashing the role of Africa as a global growth pole. The main aim of this publication is to facilitate discussion on concrete policy directions and actions at both national and regional levels that would help Africa realize its growth potential. As in previous editions, the first part of the report examines recent economic and social developments as well as some selected current and emerging development issues in Africa. The second part focuses on the question of how to address key constraints and unleash the potential of the continent as a new pole of global growth.

Dynamic Industrial Policy in Africa United Nations. Economic Commission for Africa, 2014. For millions of Africans, growth is yet to translate into jobs and better living conditions. Africa's largely commodity-driven growth has not been matched by the much-needed structural change that can lead to economic transformation, employment and reduced poverty. Market failures necessitate industrial policy interventions. Yet in the absence of the right processes and institutions, good industrial policies will fail. Indeed, weak institutions and poor policy design have hindered industrial policy. This report gives a framework for getting the policy process right to foster industrialization. It uses 11 country case studies to assess the critical ingredients for spurring industrialization: innovative institutions, effective processes and flexible mechanisms, and structural transformation.
