

LAB: Beaks of Finches

Introduction

Environmental conditions act as selecting agents because they select organisms with the most beneficial traits to become the parents of the next generation. Within a species, individuals with variations that make them better adapted to their environment will survive and reproduce in greater numbers than those without such adaptations. Observations have shown that the offspring of better-adapted individuals inherit many of their parents' favorable variations.

Finches are small birds found in many locations throughout the world. Charles Darwin used the numerous finch species found on the Galapagos Islands as evidence of natural selection. The great variety of beak adaptations present on the Galapagos is thought to be due to the isolation of bird populations on the islands with different kinds and amounts of food. Seed-eating finches exhibit a great number of differences in beak shapes and sizes. During ongoing competition for resources, some finches are successful and become more numerous, while less successful finches decrease in number.

In this laboratory activity, you will work with different tools that will serve to model finch "beaks." The seeds provided represent finch food on a particular island. You will compete with other "finch" species to see which "beak" is best adapted for obtaining a specific food.

Objectives

In this laboratory activity, you will:

- learn how structural differences may affect the survival rate of members within a species
- simulate competition for resources among different species of organisms
- see the role of the environment as a selecting agent

Pre-Lab

1. After examining all the tools, "beaks," and seeds available, which beak will be the most successful? WHY?
2. Which beak will be the least successful? WHY?
3. What characteristics of your beak make it good for picking up small seeds?

DRAW YOUR BEAK IN A SPACE SOMEWHERE ON THIS PAGE.

Procedure:

1. ROUND ONE/NO COMPETITION: We will practice for 1-2 trials together. When given the "Round One" signal, you should use your "beak" to pick up small seeds one at a time from the large dish and place them in the small dish. Repeat this for a total of 4 trials. The teacher (timekeeper) will tell you when to start and stop each trial. Record your results in the "Round One: Feeding with No Competition" data table.
2. ROUND ONE/NO COMPETITION: Calculate the average number of seeds obtained during the 4 trials. Round off to the nearest seed. In order to "survive," your species needs to collect an average of 13 seeds per trial. If you achieve that goal, you remain healthy and continue to live on the original island and eat small seeds. If you averaged fewer than 13 small seeds per trial, you will "migrate" to a new island with a different food supply to avoid starvation. Ask your teacher to give you a new large dish that contains approximately 200 or more large seeds. This will be your island for Round Two. Perhaps your "beak" will be better adapted for feeding success in a new environment. ☺ or ☹
In the "Round One: Feeding with No Competition" data table, circle stay or migrate.
