ancient writers which of late days are little read being written in obsolete and as they are generally thought unintelligible languages such as Plutarch Nepos and others which I heard of in my youth our own language affords many of excellent use and instruction finely calculated to sow the seeds of virtue in youth and very easy to be comprehended by persons of moderate capacity Such as the history of John the Great who by his brave and heroic actions against men of large and athletic bodies obtained the glorious appellation of the Giant killer that of an Earl of Warwick whose Christian name was Guy the lives of Argalus and Parthenia and above all the history of those seven worthy personages the Champions of Christendom In all these delight is mixed with instruction and the reader is almost as much improved as entertained Joseph Andrews ...
