Rasmussen, Morten Sodemann, 2024-05-14 This new volume repositions narrative medicine and trauma studies in a global context with a particular focus on ethics Trauma is a rapidly growing field of especially literary and cultural studies and the ways in which trauma has asserted its relevance across disciplines which intersect with narrative medicine and how it has come to widen the scope of narrative research and medical practice constitute the principal concerns of this volume This collection brings together contributions from established and emerging scholars coming from a wide range of academic fields within the faculty of humanities that include literary and media studies psychology philosophy history anthropology as well as medical education and health care studies This crossing of disciplines is also represented by the collaboration between the two editors Most of the authors in the volume use narrative medicine to refer to the methodology pioneered by Rita Charon and her colleagues at Columbia University but in some chapters the authors use it to refer to other methodologies and pedagogies utilizing that descriptor Trauma is today understood both in the restricted sense in which it is used in the mental health field and in its more widespread popular usage in literature This collection aspires to prolong deepen and advance the field of narrative medicine in two important aspects by bringing together both the cultural and the clinical side of trauma and by opening the investigation to a truly global horizon The Journal of Psychological Medicine and Mental Pathology, 1875
