Instructional Media and the New Technologies of Instruction Robert Heinich, Michael Molenda, James D. Russell, 1993. Grade levels 1-12. Teaching TV Production in a Digital World Robert Kenny, 2001. Here is an exciting alternative approach to teaching first-year television production to high school students. A combination of class instruction and independent video action projects prepares students for a year-end video competition. The projects are based on the concept of thematic mapping and borrow knowledge from other academic subject areas to teach media and visual literacy, broadcast history, video production skills, and multimedia animation. Kenny's exciting alternative approach to teaching first-year television production to high school students uses a combination of direct instruction, class discussion, and independent and interdisciplinary video action projects to prepare students for a year-end video competition. Engaging projects based on the concept of thematic mapping borrow knowledge and information from other academic subject areas to teach media and visual literacy, broadcast history, video production skills, and multimedia animation. The instructor manual is supplemented by a student workbook which introduces students to instructional information through fill-in-the-blanks, questioning. The workbooks also contain checklists and background information to aid students in completing the projects.

The Teacher's Guide to Media Literacy starts by asking: What does it mean to be literate in today's world, and how can those literacy skills be developed? The authors answer those questions by providing concrete, innovative ways to integrate media literacy across the curriculum and teach students to be independent, skilled, and reflective thinkers. Through dozens of suggested activities, teaching strategies, and lessons, this book's unique vision allows schools to integrate media literacy into teaching at all grade levels and core content areas. Address key education standards. Teach 21st-century skills and higher-order critical thinking. Engage students by bridging schoolwork with their lives outside the classroom. In addition to dozens of activity ideas, the text and companion website include self-reflection exercises, voices from the field, a glossary of terms, and seven annotated
