Simplify Product Development and Improve Product Quality

Applications

- Lateral flow tests

Batch Lamination System

The LM5000 clamshell laminator is a manual device used to assemble lateral flow test strips.

Precut membrane, conjugate pad, absorbent pads and plastic backing are brought together with precision overlap to create a laminated master test strip card.

The clamshell module uses vacuum to hold each component in place. The operator positions the plastic backing with the adhesive exposed on the top section.

Absorbent pads, conjugate and membrane are all placed into the bottom custom designed nest. Closing the module will enable the backing to align with other components and the card to be laminated.

Multiple nests can be purchased to accommodate different test designs. Nests are easily interchangeable.
