of HIV AIDS around the planet from the trials of the coming post petroleum world to the tactical implications of an ice free Arctic the nations of Earth are facing more radical change than ever before in the first quarter of the 21st century This important government report from the United States NATIONAL INTELLIGENCE COUNCIL which has been producing assessments of national security issues for senior U S policy makers since 1979 casts a strategic eye at the near future and examines those factors and trends that will most dramatically shape it the rapidly globalizing economy the growing global middle class the challenges of aging populations migration urbanization and ethnic shifts the rising heavyweights India and China the geopolitics of energy water food and climate change the risk of a nuclear arms race in the Middle East terrorism power sharing in a multipolar world and more Students of political trends forward looking entrepreneurs and anyone eager for a glimpse into the next decades will find this essential reading Global Trends 2030 National Intelligence National Intelligence Council, Penny Hill Press, 2015-12-04 This report is intended to stimulate thinking about the rapid and vast geopolitical changes characterizing the world today and possible global trajectories during the next 15 20 years As with the NI C s previous Global Trends reports we do not seek to predict the future which would be an impossible feat but instead provide a framework for thinking about possible futures and their implications Global Governance 2025 Álvaro de Vasconcelos, 2010 Global governance the collective management of common problems at the international level is at a critical juncture Although global governance has been a relative success since its development after the Second World War the growing number of issues on the international agenda and their complexity is outpacing the ability of international organizations and national governments to cope Power shifts are also complicating global governance Introduction From Suez to Shanghai James Rogers, 2009 This paper provides an initial foray into the emerging geopolitical situation in the Eurasian coastal zone and concentrates on the geostrategic activities of China India Japan Russia South Korea and the United States This comes at a time when geopolitics has been largely neglected at the European level the geographic dimension of European foreign and security policy has remained heavily entwined with the security and prosperity of the European Neighbourhood and parts of Africa While the European Neighbourhood particularly should not be neglected Europeans will have to develop and pursue a far more assertive and integrated grand strategy in the years ahead This paper has therefore identified the coastal zone stretching from the Suez Canal to the city of Shanghai and perhaps as far as Seoul as the most likely region to experience great power competition and general disorder over the coming decades What is more this coastal zone is of critical importance to the European Union not least because it is Europeans most important shipping route for manufactured goods and energy supplies The paper begins by examining the established and nascent maritime geostrategies of the Eurasian great powers and the potential consequences the new geopolitics might have for the European Union It then looks at European interests in the Suez to Shanghai zone and focuses on the role of geography in the region It also emphasises the likely challenges emanating from Chinese Indian Russian and American maritime competition The final section argues that as the relative balance of power between Europeans and other Eurasian powers shifts over the coming decades the European Union should provide a strong vehicle for the realisation of common European objectives ranging from the maintenance of the peace to building up European naval logistical and geopolitical capabilities Strategic Studies Quarterly ,2009 National Journal ,2008 Terrorism Robert A.
