

Lab 3: Probability: Making Use of the Rules

Imagine you roll a four-sided die (you're rolling a cube, so there are four sides) 10 times. How likely is it that you'll roll an even number on each of the 10 rolls? (You're rolling a four-sided die, so there are four possible outcomes: 1, 2, 3, or 4. The probability of rolling an even number is $\frac{2}{4} = \frac{1}{2}$. The probability of rolling an even number 10 times is $\left(\frac{1}{2}\right)^{10} = \frac{1}{1024}$.)

Probability is a number, and numbers have various properties. One interesting fact about probability is that it's always between 0 and 1. If you have a probability of 0, that means you're certain that something will happen. If you have a probability of 1, that means you're certain that something will not happen.

Imagine you have a probability of 0.5. That means you're 50% sure that something will happen. If you have a probability of 0.5, that means you're 50% sure that something will not happen.

Imagine you have a probability of 0.5. That means you're 50% sure that something will happen. If you have a probability of 0.5, that means you're 50% sure that something will not happen. The probability of something happening is 0.5, and the probability of something not happening is 0.5. The probability of something happening is 0.5, and the probability of something not happening is 0.5.

Probability: Making Use of the Rules

Think about rolling two dice together. What is the chance that you'll roll a 7? (There are 36 possible outcomes when you roll two dice, and 6 of them add up to 7, so the probability is $\frac{6}{36} = \frac{1}{6}$.)

Imagine you have a probability of 0.5. That means you're 50% sure that something will happen. If you have a probability of 0.5, that means you're 50% sure that something will not happen. The probability of something happening is 0.5, and the probability of something not happening is 0.5. The probability of something happening is 0.5, and the probability of something not happening is 0.5.
