- Identify the relationship between photosynthesis and cellular respiration.

Introduction

Cellular respiration is the process cells use to convert chemical energy, or glucose, into ATP – the cell's energy molecule. The chemical reaction for this process is:

glucose + oxygen → carbon dioxide + water + ATP

Aerobic respiration is divided into four reactions: glycolysis, which occurs in the cytoplasm of the cell; formation of acetyl Co-A and the Kreb's Cycle, which occur in the mitochondrial matrix; and the electron transport chain (ETC), which occurs in the inner mitochondrial membrane. In this lab we will compare aerobic respiration in germinated beans and dry beans. Study Figure 1 and the model of the mitochondrion in the lab to understand where these reactions take place.
