

Table 7-1 Event categories for advanced audit policy settings

Event Category	Description
Account Logon	Tracks when users are authenticated by a computer. If a local user account is used, the event is logged locally. If a domain user account is used, the event is logged at the domain controller. Account Logon events are not audited by default.
Account Management	Tracks when users and groups are created, modified, or deleted. Password changes are also tracked. Success events for user management are audited by default. Success and failure events for group management are auditing by default.
Detailed Tracking	Tracks how a computer is being used by tracking application activity. This includes identifying the creation and termination of processes, encryption events, and RPC events. No events are audited by default.
DS access	This category is not relevant for Windows 7 and is not audited by default. It is used only for domain controllers.
Logon/Logoff	User activity events, including local and domain logons, at the local computer. This category is similar to, but different from, audit account logon events. Logging on with a local account generates both an account logon event and a logon event on the local computer. Logging on with a domain account generates an account logon event at the domain controller and a logon event at the workstation where the logon occurred. Success event for logon, logoff, account lockout are audited by default. Failure events for logon are also audited.
Object Access	Tracks access to files, folders, printers, and registry keys. Each individual object being accessed must also be configured for auditing. Only files and folders on NTFS-formatted partitions can be monitored. Object access is not audited by default.
Policy Change	Tracks changes to user rights assignments, audit policies, and trust policies. Success events for audit policy changes and authentication policy changes are audited by default.
Privilege Use	Tracks when tasks are performed that require a user rights assignment, such as changing the system time. You can define which categories of privilege use are audited. None are audited by default.
System	Tracks when system events occur, such as restarting the system. By default success and failure events are audited for system integrity and other system events. Only success events are audited for security state change.
Global Object Access	Provides an easy way to specify that all access to files or registry keys should be audited. This avoids the need to configure auditing at the file, folder, or registry key level after enabling auditing for object access to files or registry keys. However, this must still be used in combination with auditing enabled for object access. This category does not appear when using auditpol.exe.
