Reduce College Statistics Anxiety Patrick Kimuyu, 2018-01-15 Document from the year 2016 in the subject Medicine Therapy grade 1 Egerton University language English abstract This literature review aims at discussing the interventions that can reduce statistics anxiety among college students To achieve this objective a concise definition of statistics anxiety as well as the distinction between statistics anxiety and math anxiety is provided as the scientific rationale why the focus of this discussion is on interventions that reduce statistics anxiety but not math anxiety in general Statistics anxiety has become an issue of concern in higher education due to its implications on teaching and learning In retrospect the trends of statistics anxiety are quite alarming This aspect is evidenced by Onwuegbuzie and Wilson 2003 who report that statistic anxiety affects 80% of behavioral and social sciences students They also report that most degree programs require students to enroll in quantitative research and statistics courses as part of their training These statistic courses are reported to evoke anxiety provoking experiences among students Similarly Macher et al 2013 reaffirm that statistics courses have been found to be the major source of anxiety in student s curriculum Further evidence is provided by Dykeman s 2011 study which investigated the levels of anxiety between students in statistic courses and those in other education courses Results of this study revealed that statistics students had lower self efficacy p Introduction to Teaching Donald P. Kauchak, Paul D. Eggen, 2005 The
