

Chemical Reactions and Equations

Chemical reactions are the process in which new substance with new properties are formed.

The burning of magnesium in air to form magnesium oxide is an example of a chemical reaction

Note:- The magnesium ribbon which we use usually has a coating of 'magnesium oxide' on its surface which is formed by the slow action of oxygen of air on it. So before burning in air, the magnesium ribbon is cleaned by rubbing with a sand paper. This is done to remove the protective layer of magnesium oxide from the surface of magnesium ribbon so that it may readily combine with the oxygen of air.
