The Times Index ,2007 Indexes the Times and its supplements Guidance on the Inspection of Secondary Schools ,1995 Inspecting Schools Brian Wilcox,John Gray,1996 During the first half of the 1990s the British government turned inspection into an ambitious instrument of educational policy making Initially it encouraged local education authorities to experiment with inspection in all its forms Growing impatient with the pace of change however a new policy was brought into force after the 1992 General Election Schools were to be inspected on a hitherto unprecedented scale Every primary and secondary school in England and Wales was to undergo a full inspection once every four years At the same time a new agency the Office for Standards in Education OFSTED was set up to organize the new programme Their concern they declared was not merely to hold schools to account but to help them to improve So called failing schools in particular would be identified and put on notice to change The research reported here is one of the very first independent attempts to explore the aftermath of inspection and the ways in which schools do or don't take up inspectors' challenges. What kinds of recommendations do schools find relatively easy to implement? Which factors seem to make a difference? Do so-called failing schools require special treatment? In short, has a powerful tool for school improvement been discovered? Or is its leverage on change processes in practice more modest? The history of school inspections in Britain stretches back over 150 years. Despite this lengthy tradition, its effects have up till now been simply asserted or taken for granted. Inspecting Schools offers a compelling account of the limits and possibilities of inspection as a mechanism for school reform. BOOK JACKET Title Summary field provided by Blackwell North America Inc. All Rights Reserved. Managing Continuing Professional Development in Schools British Educational Management and Administration Society, 1997-04-28. Based on experience in schools, this analysis of continuing professional development in schools acts as a guide for teachers and for those entering the profession. It includes case studies which explore good practice at all stages of the teacher's career. The Annual Report of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools Great Britain. Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools, 2004. Missing Men in Education Mary Thornton, Patricia Bricheno, 2006. This book reports on the ten years' research by the authors into men in teaching. There is much concern about boys' underachievement in schools compared to girls. But attributing this to the dearth of men in teaching is based on assumption and panic and not on hard fact. Here at last is research-based evidence on the impact of men's presence or absence and their role in this predominantly female profession. The book presents a historical perspective on whether and how the lack of men in teaching significantly affects boys' learning and behavior in school. It considers the complexity of male teacher subjectivities and identities and maps the origins, motivations and career trajectories of men teachers as compared to women. It thus informs professional and public understanding of gender issues in teaching and their effect on pupils' learning and on the profession itself. The conclusions have important implications for future policies on recruitment, retention and career progression. Missing Men in Education is for teachers and lecturers across all sectors, school governors and managers at all levels, careers advisers, government departments and policymakers, teacher trainers and anyone concerned to get beyond public rhetoric and knee-jerk initiatives. Reengineering and Total Quality in Schools Brent Davies, 1997. This text aims to challenge the way we think of schools and the learning process. By describing a total quality and re-engineering approach, it provides a base from which to examine how certain schools are re-engineering themselves to cope with the challenges of the 21st century. Teachers, Teacher Education, and Training Keith Watson, Celia Modgil, Sohan Modgil, 1997. One of a series of four high-level debates on major educational issues, this book concerns the controversies about the role of the teacher and the place and content of teacher preparation. Hitotsubashi Journal of Social Studies, 2004. From the Head Upwards Gunter Helft, 2001. Country Life Illustrated, 2009. Making Sense of Primary Inspection Ian Sandbrook, 1996. Library + Information Update, 2006.
