Environmental Policy and Public Health Barry L. Johnson, Maureen Y. Lichtveld, 2017-10-24 As with the first edition this second edition describes how environmental health policies are developed the statutes and other policies that have evolved to address public health concerns associated with specific environmental hazards and the public health foundations of the policies It lays out policies for what is considered the major environmental physical hazards to human health Specifically the authors describe hazards from air water food hazardous substances and wastes To this list the authors have added the additional concerns from climate change tobacco products genetically modified organisms environment related diseases energy production biodiversity and species endangerment and the built environment And as with the first edition histories of policymaking for specific environmental hazards are portrayed This edition differs from its antecedent in three significant themes Global perspectives are added to chapters that describe specific environmental hazards e g air pollution policies in China and India Also there is the material on the consequences of environmental hazards on both human and ecosystem health Additionally readers are provided with information about interventions that policymakers and individuals can consider in mitigating or preventing specific environmental hazards Consumer Protection Act 68 of 2009 and Regulations South Africa, Juta Law (Firm), 2011-01-01 Consumer Protection Act 68 of 2008 & Rules and Regulations South Africa, 2018

The Influence of the Consumer Protection Act 68 of 2008 on the Common Law Obligations of the Seller Vis-à-vis Risk and Duty to Take Care, Eviction, and Defects Heila Levina Helena Catharina Kruger, 2013 Consumer Protection Act 68 of 2008 and Regulations and Related Material South Africa, Juta Law (Firm), Juta's Statutes Editors, 2011 The Yearbook of Consumer Law 2008 Christian Twigg-Flesner, 2007 The Yearbook of Consumer Law provides a valuable outlet for high quality scholarly work which tracks developments in the consumer law field with a domestic regional and international dimension Furthermore it provides an essential resource for all those academic and practitioner working in the areas of consumer law and policy Employee Benefits in Mergers and Acquisitions , 2008 □□ □□ , 1999 A Comparative and Critical Discussion of the Redress Available to Consumers by Consumer Courts in Terms of the Consumer Protection Act 68 of 2008 Roman Chausse, 2013 The fundamental consumer rights granted to consumers by the Consumer Protection Act 68 of 2008 hereinafter referred to as the CPA would be without meaning if no avenues of redress were available to enforce them The National Consumer Commission as well as the National Consumer Tribunal and the consumer courts will enforce the Act One of the more central and important aims of the CPA section 69 is to ensure that an aggrieved consumer has access to redress this also being one of the European Union s consumer protection rights The CPA therefore empowers the consumer by setting out redress options where a consumer believes that his or her right has been infringed. There is a wide range of options available to consumers if they have a complaint in terms of the CPA. Sections 68 to 76 which are found in Chapter 3 Part A to C are the provisions that deal with the protection of Consumer Rights. In terms of the CPA, consumers are not obliged to approach the supplier against whom they have a complaint before first going somewhere else. In terms of section 69 of the Act, the category of persons listed in section 4(1) can enforce a right in terms of the Act or in terms of a transaction or agreement or resolve a dispute with a supplier by referring the matter directly to the National Consumer Tribunal, referring the matter to the applicable recognised ombud with jurisdiction over the supplier and if the matter does not concern the supplier contemplated in s 69(b) referring the matter to the applicable accredited industry ombud with jurisdiction. The consumer may also apply to the relevant consumer court of the province with jurisdiction subject to the provincial legislation governing it. A dispute may also be referred to an alternative dispute agent filing a complaint with the National Consumer Commission or approaching a court with jurisdiction over the matter only when all the other remedies available to that person in terms of national legislation have been exhausted. The main focus of the research will be the role of consumer courts in particular and their possible enforcement and execution shortcomings. The consumer courts are regulated on a national level in terms of the CPA and on provincial level in terms of provincial legislation of the various provinces. I will illustrate these shortcomings in a discussion of two relevant cases. A short discussion of the other options available to the consumers for redress in terms of the CPA will also be included. Other avenues of redress that will briefly be discussed are complaints lodged to the National Consumer Tribunal, the National Consumer Commission and alternative dispute resolution. Since the CPA became fully effective on the 31 of March 2011 and is more in line with international trends in consumer protection law, a short comparative study is necessary. I will be looking at the consumer law in Scotland which is affected by the UK consumer law in the United Kingdom.

Unpacking the Right to Plain and Understandable

Language in the Consumer Protection Act 68 of 2008 Philip N. Stoop, 2014. The Consumer Protection Act 68 of 2008 came into effect on 1 April 2011. The purpose of this Act is among other things to promote fairness, openness and respectable business practice between the suppliers of goods or services and the consumers of such goods and services. In consumer protection legislation, fairness is usually approached from two directions, namely substantive and procedural fairness. Measures aimed at procedural fairness address conduct during the bargaining process and generally aim at ensuring transparency. Transparency in relation to the terms of a contract relates to whether the terms of the contract are accessible in clear language, well structured and cross referenced, with prominence being given to terms that are detrimental to the consumer or because they grant important rights. One measure in the Act aimed at addressing procedural fairness is the right to plain and understandable language. The consumer's right to being given information in plain and understandable language as it is expressed in section 22 is embedded under the umbrella right of information and disclosure in the Act.

Section 22 requires that notices documents or visual representations that are required in terms of the Act or other law are to be provided in plain and understandable language as well as in the prescribed form where such a prescription exists In the analysis of the concept plain and understandable language the following aspects are considered in this article the development of plain language measures in Australia and the United Kingdom the structure and purpose of section 22 the documents that must be in plain language the definition of plain language the use of official languages in consumer contracts and plain language guidelines based on the law of the states of Pennsylvania and Connecticut in the United States of America
