

INTEGRATED SCIENCE

1. Integrated science is important in daily life as it helps us understand phenomena by combining knowledge from various scientific disciplines. For example, understanding the principles of physics, chemistry, and biology helps in cooking food where heat transfer (physics) affects chemical reactions (chemistry) and biological processes (nutrition).
2. Grace can separate iron and sulfur by using a magnet to attract the iron filings, leaving the sulfur behind. This method works because iron is magnetic while sulfur is not. However, this method wouldn't work for separating a mixture of salt and sugar because both substances are soluble in water and cannot be separated by magnetic attraction.
3. (a) Sample D is acidic (pH 5.0).

D: Embryo - develops into a fetus during pregnancy.
6. Skin passes out sweat (containing metabolic wastes like urea and salts) while the kidney excretes urine (containing metabolic wastes, excess ions, and water).

(b) a simple electric circuit with cells arranged in parallel
9. Walking in an open field during rain is dangerous due to the risk of being struck by lightning, as open spaces increase the likelihood of being a target for lightning strikes.
10. Integrated science equips individuals with problem-solving skills applicable in various situations. For instance, understanding ecological principles helps in addressing environmental issues like pollution or resource management in localities.
11. (a) The area of the plastic bottle is 3.5 cm^2 .
(b) To determine the area of the plastic bottle, we need more information such as the shape of the bottle (e.g., cylindrical, rectangular). Without this information, we cannot accurately determine the area.
12. Conical Flasks,
Mixing and Dissolving: Conical flasks are often used for mixing solutions and dissolving solutes in solvents due to their conical shape, which allows for efficient stirring and swirling without excessive splashing.
13. A: Eyepiece - magnifies the image of the specimen.
P: Objective lens - further magnifies the image of the specimen.
14. Simple distillation: is a process used to separate components of a mixture based on differences in their boiling points. It's commonly employed to purify liquids, especially when the components have significantly different boiling points.
15. Four sources of electric energy are solar power, hydroelectric power, wind power, and fossil fuels (coal, oil, natural gas).
16. When a south pole of a magnet is brought near the north pole of another magnet, they attract each other due to magnetic forces.
17. (a) Ovulation phase: Release of a mature egg from the ovary into the fallopian tube.
(b) Luteal phase: The ruptured follicle transforms into a structure called the corpus luteum, which secretes progesterone to prepare the uterus for potential pregnancy.
