unveils the concept of social love as a kind of Karst River that flows through the history of sociology, reassessing it as a form of criticism by people in everyday life. Adopting an interdisciplinary perspective, this book offers both theoretical and empirical reflections on social love. It shows that love is not only central to the human experience but that it can also help to interpret and intervene in social problems such as climate change, poverty, xenophobia and the post-Covid crisis, recognizing people as actors in social change. It explores the idea of love as a key element in the promotion of solidarity and recognition in today's plural and unequal societies. Based on empirical research on social love conducted through both qualitative and quantitative methods, especially in Europe and Latin America, this book explores the social dimension of love. Providing overviews on key questions and studies on current issues, the book is an essential reference and resource for researchers, students, social workers and professionals in social sciences, social philosophy, anthropology, social psychology, sociology of emotions and postmodern
