

Piriformis
Muscle

This anatomical diagram illustrates the human pelvis and lower spine from a posterior perspective. The bony structures, including the lumbar and sacral vertebrae, the iliac crests, and the ischial spines, are rendered in a realistic tan color. The Piriformis muscles are highlighted in a vibrant red, showing their symmetrical placement on both sides of the midline. Each muscle originates from the anterior surface of the greater sciatic foramen, specifically between the sacral spine and the greater sciatic foramen. The fibers of the muscle fan out laterally and inferiorly towards the greater trochanter of the femur. Two white leader lines with circular endpoints point from the text labels to the Piriformis muscles on the left and right sides.
