Geoffrey Till,2012 The Asia Pacific region is likely to be the fulcrum of international security affairs in the twenty first century As the region s economies become stronger defense budgets are rising and navies are expanding and modernizing Some aspects of this procurement drive show signs of action reaction dynamics between peer competitors the hallmark of an arms race Is the Asia Pacific on the brink of an outright naval arms race that could entail vast expenditures threaten regional security and severely disrupt global trade Or can rising naval capabilities and a desire for prestige among regional powers be reconciled with economic interdependence freedom of navigation and managed competition between great powers This analyzes the naval expansion of the four major Asia Pacific powers the US China India and Japan It looks at recent and planned procurement to find examples of action reaction behavior and analyzes the underlying tensions and the potential for competition. It offers an insight into the size, expenditure and capability of the naval forces in each country and the role of the navy in overall military strategy. It examines naval philosophies and specific security concerns and how these will influence decision making and assesses how each nation's naval strategy is evolving in response not only to global threats but to shifts in the regional power balance. U.S. Army Campaigns of the Civil War: The Civil War in the West, 1863 Andrew N. Morris, The Civil War in the West 1863 by Andrew N. Morris is the latest addition to the Center of Military History's U.S. Army Campaigns of the Civil War series. In 1863 Union and Confederate forces fought for control of Chattanooga, a key rail center. The Confederates were victorious at nearby Chickamauga in September. However, renewed fighting in Chattanooga that November provided Union troops a victory, control of the city and drove the Confederates south into Georgia. The Union success left its armies poised to invade the Deep South the following year.

Combined Arms Warfare in the Twentieth Century Jonathan Mallory House, 2001

For centuries the world has witnessed the development and use of increasingly complex and powerful military systems and technologies. In the process the art of war has truly become the art of combined arms warfare in which infantry, artillery, air support, intelligence and other key elements are all coordinated for maximum effect. Nowhere has this trend been more visible than in the history of twentieth century warfare. Originally published as an essential in-house study for U.S. Army officers during the 1980s, this much revised and expanded edition remains the most complete study available on the subject. Rewritten with a much wider readership in mind, it both retains its enormous practical utility for military professionals and provides a valuable and appealing introduction for scholars and general readers. Jonathan House, author of the original work, brings the story of combined arms up to the present, covering among other things Desert Storm, the war in Chechnya and the rise of smart weapons and related technologies. He traces the evolution of tactics, weapons and organization in five major militaries: American, British, German, Russian and French over 100 years of warfare. Revealing both continuities and contrasts within and between these fighting forces, he also provides illuminating glimpses of Israeli and Japanese contributions to combined arms doctrine. Expanding his insightful analysis of the world wars and the wars in Korea and Vietnam, House also offers much new material focused on the post Vietnam period Throughout he analyzes such issues as command and control problems of highly centralized organizations the development of special operations forces advances in weapons technology including ballistic and anti ballistic missile systems the trade offs involved in using heavy versus light armed forces and the enduring obstacles to effective cooperation between air and land forces His strong critique of the air superiority propaganda that came out of the Gulf War is sure to spark some heated debates Rigorously comparative House s study addresses significant questions about how nations prepare for war learn or don t learn its harsh lessons and adapt to changing times and technologies Unique in the annals of the literature on warfare it will be the standard work on this subject for a long time to come
