The Interplay of Pesticides and Climate Change Babafemi Raphael Babaniyi, Ebunoluwa Elizabeth Babaniyi, 2025-03-05 This book originates from a recognition of the urgent necessity to unravel the intricate connections between pesticides and the evolving climate By focusing on environmental dynamics the book extensively discusses how pesticides and climate change intersect providing a comprehensive exploration of their combined effects on ecosystems Each chapter of the book meticulously analyzes various aspects of the interplay Ranging from the methods of pesticide dispersion to their durability and subsequent ecological consequences the authors offer a holistic examination of the challenges posed by the convergence of pesticides and climate change One of the primary aims of this book is to bridge existing knowledge gaps pertaining to the environmental dynamics of pesticides in the context of a changing climate The comprehensive insights provided within its pages serve as a valuable resource for researchers policymakers and practitioners alike The objective is not only to identify the challenges inherent in this interplay but also to present practical solutions that contribute to the development of sustainable practices By addressing critical issues and offering a forward looking perspective the book strives to pave the way for informed decision making and the implementation of effective strategies to mitigate the environmental challenges arising from the interplay of pesticides and climate change

Agriculture-nutrition linkages in Tajikistan: Evidence from household survey data Takeshima, Hiroyuki, Akramov, Kamiljon T., Park, Allen, Ilyasov, Jarilkasin, Liu, Yanyan, Ergasheva, Tanzila, 2018-11-15 In Tajikistan the poorest country in the Central Asia region and one of the poorest in the world food consumption patterns remain inadequate for a significant share of the population Undernutrition and child stunting among other outcomes remain prevalent At the same time overnutrition and obesity are becoming increasingly serious Using pooled cross section datasets collected in 2007 and 2015 from farm households in Khatlon province the major agricultural area in Tajikistan we investigate how key agricultural production practices APPs household level production diversification land productivity and production scale are associated with household level and individual level nutritional outcomes including dietary diversity and children s and women s anthropometric outcomes We find that in rural Khatlon these APPs are positively associated with various nutritional outcomes at the household level Furthermore applying the methodologies of Lee

1979 Maddala 1983 and Bj rklund and Moffitt 1987 we find that a different set of factors affects the unobserved returns and costs of these APPs which are heterogeneous across households and that importantly adoption of these APPs is partly driven by the expected returns However despite the positive gross returns diversifying farm production or raising land productivity is costly among small and resource poor farms Improving their access to land and agricultural capital as well as improving overall land productivity with particular support to women may be critical for enhancing their nutritional outcomes by exploiting agriculture s linkages to such outcomes
