

The background of the cover is a detailed historical painting. It depicts a mountainous landscape. In the upper right, a large, multi-story white building with a red roof and an American flag on top sits on a high plateau. Below the building, a steep, light-colored cliff face descends into a dense forest of green trees. In the foreground, a wide, reddish-brown dirt path winds through the landscape. On the right side of the path, a yellow stagecoach pulled by two dark horses is moving uphill. On the left side of the path, a group of people in 19th-century attire are gathered. Two women in long dresses and hats stand together, while others are seated or standing nearby. The overall scene suggests a popular tourist destination in the late 19th century.

Making Mountains New York City And The Catskills:

Making Mountains David Stradling, 2009-11-23 For over two hundred years the Catskill Mountains have been repeatedly and dramatically transformed by New York City In Making Mountains David Stradling shows the transformation of the Catskills landscape as a collaborative process one in which local and urban hands capital and ideas have come together to reshape the mountains and the communities therein This collaboration has had environmental economic and cultural consequences Early on the Catskills were an important source of natural resources Later when New York City needed to expand its water supply engineers helped direct the city toward the Catskills claiming that the mountains offered the purest and most cost effective waters By the 1960s New York had created the great reservoir and aqueduct system in the mountains that now supplies the city with 90 percent of its water The Catskills also served as a critical space in which the nation's ideas about nature evolved Stradling describes the great influence writers and artists had upon urban residents especially the painters of the Hudson River School whose ideal landscapes created expectations about how rural America should appear By the mid 1800s urban residents had turned the Catskills into an important vacation ground and by the late 1800s the Catskills had become one of the premiere resort regions in the nation In the mid twentieth century the older Catskill resort region was in steep decline but the Jewish Borscht Belt in the southern Catskills was thriving The automobile revitalized mountain tourism and residence and increased the threat of suburbanization of the historic landscape Throughout each of these significant incarnations urban and rural residents worked in a rough collaboration though not without conflict to reshape the mountains and American ideas about rural landscapes and nature of a Forest Robert Kuhn McGregor,2018-01-25 The re established forests of the Upper Delaware exist as a living reminder of centuries of both exploitation and good intentions Emerging after the last glaciation they were first modified by Native Americans to promote hunting and limited agriculture The forests began to disappear as Europeans clear cut farmland and fed sawmills and tanneries The advent of the railroad accelerated demand and within 30 years industry had consumed virtually every mature tree in the valley leaving barren hillsides subject to erosion and flooding Even as unchecked cutting continued conservation efforts began to save what little remained A century and a half later a forest for the 21st century has emerged an ecological patchwork protected by a web of governmental agencies yet still subject to danger from humans
