8. F For water to travel across the cell membrane at a substantial rate, the water molecules travel through protein channels known as aquaporins.
9. S While water molecules are polar, they are also very small. One fact not mentioned in the video is that some water molecules are able to sequester directly through the phospholipid bilayer due to their small size.
10. F Charged ions are travelling through a cell membrane with the concentration gradient.
11. A Cells living the gut need to take in glucose, but at a certain time, the concentration of extracellular glucose is lower than the concentration already stored in the cells.
12. S At a certain time, glucose is in a high concentration outside of a cell and needs to travel through the membrane into the cell.
