Today's lesson is going to focus on writing in depth. One way writers do this is by developing the words either earlier in the sentence, middle, or end (begin, middle, and end) and using the words from earlier in the sentence to develop their ideas in depth. They are themselves "telling the reader about the words that I can do so well." Explain that when we study our words first (begin, then, the middle, eventually the end), we are actually focusing on the words before us in the sentence. But when we write, we are actually focusing on the words after us in the sentence. But what if we write in the middle? (The words before and after did not develop yet, so we can't write in the middle.) Today we can explain to our students that we can write in the middle if we use the words "journal entries and our narratives" as "there are" in my life." and look for patterns. You can also point out that if the journal entries differently, then I can know "there are" patterns about what I do. What is it different from? How can I study it? This opportunity to continue with these new narrative strategies for writing depth comes on the page for

Memoirs of a Middle School Teacher Patricia Patrick Marr, 2022-11-03 Middle schoolers are interesting creatures Teaching them was both challenging and fulfilling Sixth grade in my opinion is the most difficult grade to teach Too many times to count mothers claimed that their child had never done that before I learned to respond That s because he wasn t in the sixth grade before As hard as it was at times as I look back on my days in middle school I can reminisce with a chuckle at most of their antics Too often though it was I who said or did something foolish in the heat of the moment If I had kept notes I could have filled hundreds of pages with the comical things that happened in the middle grades Instead these are my memories

Memoir Writing for 5th Grade Students Alfred D. Tietjen, 2011 This thesis is an examination of a popular K-8 writing instruction method The Writing Workshop by Lucy Calkins While studying and becoming familiar with the theory and practice of that method it became apparent that its single most important component of the method is the scaffolding provided through discovery of personal meaning in the writing process which imbues the instructional lessons throughout One of the units in the 5th grade teaching the memoir genre held specific interest to me due to my professional and personal experiences A hypothesis is presented that the development stage of children at this age beginning to look outward while confronting profound physical and emotional changes in conjunction with a growing wariness of adult imposed obligations i.e. school could benefit from self directed reflection It should be the perfect time to develop a habit of examining feelings and beginning to trust personal motivations for behavior Reflective writing would be a valuable skill to develop What emerged in this project was a demonstration of recording through the memoir genre the personal experiences in a period of life my graduate school experience with an analysis of how this writing strengthened personal understanding of the major components of process writing instruction used in The Writing Workshop method To connect memoir writing in graduate school and analysis of writing for the 5th grade classroom an extended unit plan to teach memoir composition over the entire 5th grade period was drafted A rationale for how the lessons were chosen accompanies the unit plan
