Women and the Law

Lesson Objectives:

This module discusses about the various Philippine laws affecting women and their rights. At the end of this module, you should be able to:

- know about the various Philippine laws affecting women;
- identify the various rights of women; and
- understand the impact of these laws and rights to the Filipino woman and society.

Definition of Terms:

- The 1987 Constitution - the fundamental law of the country upon which all the laws are anchored or based on;
- Magna Carta of Women - the main law enshrining all the rights of women and their roles in building the nation; and
- Nation Building - collaborative efforts and means to establish and develop the country.

Introduction

The 1987 Constitution

The Philippines is known for its very liberal and progressive Constitution that was formulated during the euphoria of People Power Revolution in 1986. Gender equality is a key element of this Charter and as enshrined in Article II Section 14 of the 1987 Constitution, "the State recognizes the role of women in nation-building and shall ensure the fundamental equality before the law of women and men."

Considering the unequal gender relations in the country, the Constitution further provided for women representation (as one of the nine marginalized sectors) in the legislature through the party-list system (which should cover 20% of the lower house).

Finally, Article 13 Section 14 specifically mentioned that the "State shall protect working women by providing safe and healthful working conditions, taking into account their maternal functions, and such facilities and opportunities that will enhance their welfare and enable them to realize their full potential in the service of the nation".
