Dear Mr. White,

My name is Andrew Milward and I am writing to you on behalf of Ron Schilling. This past year I was the James C. McCreight Fiction Fellow at the University of Wisconsin. As a visiting writer, I taught a class each semester at the university and gave a public reading of my work. About six months ago I also started volunteering at Oak Hill Correctional Facility. Along with two other local writers in the community, I co-facilitated a weekly creative writing group for incarcerated men at the prison. It was there that I met and came to know Ron.

I believe Ron Schilling has paid for his crime (over 32 years) and would be a valued and contributing member to society. He is a caring and giving person. Each week in class he offered generous feedback to his younger classmates and in doing so acted as a kind of fatherly example for others. An accomplished guitar player and songwriter, he wrote a new song for every class meeting and we always finished class by listening to Ron play his latest creation. His songs are moving and express the desire for himself—and all of us—to always aspire to be our best selves, which is to say caring, giving, respectful, and kind. I have seen Ron display these qualities and I hope you strongly consider him for parole. Aside from serving our country bravely and with distinction in Vietnam, he has paid for his crime, his involvement in which he accepts responsibility for. I beg you: Free Ron Schilling and you won't regret it. He will take those qualities I've seen him display in the difficult environment of prison and bring them back to the community, enriching us all.

Thank you for your time. Sincerely,

Andrew Milward
