Columbia Crew Survival Investigation Report United States. National Aeronautics and Space Administration, 2008 NASA commissioned the Columbia Accident Investigation Board CAIB to conduct a thorough review of both the technical and the organizational causes of the loss of the Space Shuttle Columbia and her crew on February 1 2003 The accident investigation that followed determined that a large piece of insulating foam from Columbia's external tank ET had come off during ascent and struck the leading edge of the left wing causing critical damage The damage was undetected during the mission The CAIB's findings and recommendations were published in 2003 and are available on the web at <http://caib.nasa.gov> NASA responded to the CAIB findings and recommendations with the Space Shuttle Return to Flight Implementation Plan 1 Significant enhancements were made to NASA's organizational structure technical rigor and understanding of the flight environment The ET was redesigned to reduce foam shedding and eliminate critical debris In 2005 NASA succeeded in returning the space shuttle to flight In 2010 the space shuttle will complete its mission of assembling the International Space Station and will be retired to make way for the next generation of human space flight vehicles the Constellation Program The Space Shuttle Program recognized the importance of capturing the lessons learned from the loss of Columbia and her crew to benefit future human exploration particularly future vehicle design The program commissioned the Spacecraft Crew Survival Integrated Investigation Team SCSIIT The SCSIIT was asked to perform a comprehensive analysis of the accident focusing on factors and events affecting crew survival and to develop recommendations for improving crew survival for all future human space flight vehicles To do this the SCSIIT investigated all elements of crew survival including the design features equipment training and procedures intended to protect the crew This report documents the SCSIIT findings conclusions and recommendations PDF Executive summary

Columbia Crew Survival Investigation Report Nasa, 2009 NASA commissioned the Columbia Accident Investigation Board CAIB to conduct a thorough review of both the technical and the organizational causes of the loss of the Space Shuttle Columbia and her crew on February 1 2003 The accident investigation that followed determined that a large piece of insulating foam from Columbia s external tank ET had come off during ascent and struck the leading edge of the left wing causing critical damage The damage was undetected during the mission The Columbia accident was not survivable After the Columbia Accident Investigation Board CAIB investigation regarding the cause of the accident was completed further consideration produced the question of whether there were lessons to be learned about how to improve crew survival in the future This investigation was performed with the belief that a comprehensive respectful investigation could provide knowledge that can protect future crews in the worldwide community of human space flight Additionally in the course of the investigation several areas of research were identified that could improve our understanding of both nominal space flight and future spacecraft accidents This report is the first comprehensive publicly available accident investigation report addressing crew survival for a human spacecraft mishap and it provides key information for future crew survival investigations The results of this investigation are intended to add meaning to the sacrifice of the crew s lives by making space flight safer for all future generations

Toxic Mix? Herbert N. Foerstel, 2009-12-09 This book presents a comprehensive analysis of the

contentious relationship between the White House and the scientific community from the FDR administration to the Obama administration Toxic Mix A Handbook of Science and Politics takes a topic very much in the center of public debate in the last decade and places it in a revealing historical context It follows the often contentious relationship of science and politics from the FDR era to the current Obama administration highlighting the many highly charged moments when the two were in conflict Toxic Mix ranges across the major areas of scientific inquiry with public policy implications including atomic energy space science public health stem cells sexual reproduction environmental science global warming and evolution to examine important events where political imperatives and scientific research were at odds In addition the book looks at another important area where politics and science are at cross purposes immigration as many of our most accomplished degree earners are foreign born and are unable to stay and work in the United States A final chapter analyzes the attempts by the early Obama administration to build public policy that embraces science rather than manipulates it Critical issues in the history of spaceflight Steven J. Dick,2018 Critical Issues in the History of Spaceflight Stephen J. Dick,Steven J. Dick,Roger D. Launius,2006 In March 2005 the NASA History Division and the Division of Space History at the National Air and Space Museum brought together a distinguished group of scholars to consider the state of the discipline of space history This volume is a collection of essays based on those deliberations The meeting took place at a time of extraordinary transformation for NASA stemming from the new Vision of Space Exploration announced by President George W Bush in January 2004 to go to the Moon Mars and beyond This Vision in turn stemmed from a deep reevaluation of NASA's goals in the wake of the Space Shuttle Columbia accident and the recommendations of the Columbia Accident Investigation Board The new goals were seen as initiating a New Age of Exploration and were placed in the context of the importance of exploration and discovery to the American experiences Amazon Columbia Accident Investigation Report United States. Toward a History of the Space Shuttle: 1992-2011 Roger D. Launius, 1992 Columbia Accident Investigation Board. Volume One National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), 2018-08-20 The Columbia Accident Investigation Board's independent investigation into the February 1 2003 loss of the Space Shuttle Columbia and its seven member crew lasted nearly seven months A staff of more than 120 along with some 400 NASA engineers supported the Board's 13 members Investigators examined more than 30 000 documents conducted more than 200 formal interviews heard testimony from dozens of expert witnesses and reviewed more than 3 000 inputs from the general public In addition more than 25 000 searchers combed vast stretches of the Western United States to retrieve the spacecraft's debris In the process Columbia's tragedy was compounded when two debris searchers with the U S Forest Service perished in a helicopter accident This report concludes with recommendations some of which are specifically identified and prefaced as before return to flight These recommendations are largely related to the physical cause of the accident and include preventing the loss of foam improved imaging of the Space Shuttle stack from liftoff through separation of the External Tank and on orbit inspection and repair of the Thermal Protection System The remaining recommendations for the most part stem from the Board's findings on organizational cause factors While they are not before return to flight recommendations they can be viewed as continuing to fly recommendations as they capture the Board's thinking on what changes are necessary to operate the Shuttle and future spacecraft safely in the mid to long term These recommendations reflect both the Board's strong support for return to flight at the earliest date consistent with the overriding objective of safety and the Board's conviction that operation of the Space Shuttle and all human space flight is a developmental activity with high inherent risks Unspecified Center
