Dhami, 2016 It considers the evidence against the exponential discounted utility model and describes several behavioral models such as hyperbolic discounting attribute based models and the reference time theory Part IV describes the evidence on classical game theory and considers several models of behavioral game theory including level k and cognitive hierarchy models quantal response equilibrium and psychological game theory Part V considers behavioral models of learning that include evolutionary game theory classical models of learning experience weighted attraction model learning direction theory and stochastic social dynamics Part VI studies the role of emotions among other topics it considers projection bias temptation preferences happiness economics and interaction between emotions and cognition Part VII considers bounded rationality The three main topics considered are judgment heuristics and biases mental accounting and behavioral finance The Psychology of Economic Decisions Isabelle Brocas, Juan D. Carrillo, 2003 Psychologists and economists often ask similar questions about human behaviour This volume brings together contributions from leaders in both disciplines The editorial introduction discusses methodological differences between the two which have until now limited the development of mutually beneficial lines of research Psychologists have objected to what they see as an excessive formalism in economic modelling and an unrealistic degree of sophistication in the behaviour of individuals while economists criticize the absence of a general psychological framework into which most results can be fitted and the lack of welfare implications in their theories The editors encourage scholars to exploit the strengths of each discipline the ability of psychologists to understand the feelings and motivation of individuals and the experience of economists to develop normative frameworks The editors then highlight the links between the contributions by grouping them according to central themes in the study of rationality and well being 1 The causes and consequences of irrational behaviour 2 The role of anticipatory feelings and imperfect self knowledge on decision making 3 The way in which memory of past events and cost of thinking affect current decisions 4 The interaction between anticipated and remembered utility and its effects on the welfare of individuals 5 Experimental practice on how to perform controlled experiments to test hypotheses This exciting volume the Ecological Approach To Human-Machine Systems Peter A. Hancock, John M. Flach, Jeff Caird, Kim J. Vicente, 2018-05-02 There is a growing consensus in the human factors ergonomics community that human factors research has had little impact on significant applied problems Some have suggested that the problem lies in the fact that much HF E research has been based on the wrong type of psychology an information processing view of psychology that is reductionistic and context free Ecological psychology offers a viable alternative presenting a richer view of human behavior that is holistic and contextualized The papers presented in these two volumes show the conceptual impact that ecological psychology can have on HF E as well as presenting a number of specific examples illustrating the ecological approach to human machine systems It is the first collection of papers that explicitly draws a connection between these two fields While work in this area is only just beginning the evidence available suggests that taking an ecological approach to human factors ergonomics helps bridge the existing gap between basic research and applied problems Testing the Boundary Conditions of Biases Resulting
