

KIC Profiler Technology

The KIC Profiler uses different technology to complete its task of running profiles. The main difference between it and other profilers is the following:

- Air thermocouple – For all profiles run with the KIC 2000 software the thermocouple plugged into the first channel on the SlimKIC 2000 or KIC Explorer must be the Air TC. This TC is positioned 1-inch in front of the leading edge of the board for all profiles run using KIC 2000 software.
- Trigger temperatures – KIC Profilers use trigger temperatures to start and stop the profile. The Start temperature is defaulted to 5 degrees above the Maximum Product Start temperature. See Global Preferences for this setting.
- Hardware Monitor - The combination of the KIC Profiler and the KIC 2000 software closely monitors the KIC Profilers battery, internal temperature and the product temperature even before you start a profile. There are built-in checks in the software to insure that the product and KIC Profiler are cool enough and battery voltage sufficient to complete a profile safely. As well it will offer troubleshooting suggestions if there is a problem with communication or thermocouple attachment.
- Perfect Data – Through patent pending technology the SlimKIC 2000 is able to get you perfect data every time. At the completion of a profile the SlimKIC 2000 retransmits the data it has stored in its memory. This insures the integrity of the data, especially if there were any interruptions in the transmission during the profile.
