Massachusetts Teacher Evaluation Binder Model:

Massachusetts Model System for Educator Evaluation ,2012 Resources in Education ,1999-04 Educator Evaluation Catherine Brown,Lisette Partelow,Annette Konoske-Graf,2016 There has been a sea change in teacher evaluation over the past eight years Inspired in part by President Barack Obama s policies schools have instituted teacher evaluation systems that include multiple measures of teacher impact Model systems are aligned to systems of continuous improvement helping teachers identify areas of weakness in their practice and linking them with related support This shift toward more formal systems of evaluation is essential to ensure high quality teaching and learning Evaluation systems are not the only lever for improving teacher quality but when they are well designed they can be a critical part of teacher development and support because they provide a framework from which teachers can improve their practice In recent years teacher evaluation systems have come under fire in some communities Teachers and advocates have argued that student test scores are not an accurate or fair way to assess teacher performance Though only a small fraction of the teacher workforce has standardized testing connected to their performance evaluation this argument has taken hold Nevertheless many teachers and system leaders have embraced the need to improve teacher evaluation systems so that they become tools for improving practice and ensuring teachers are receiving appropriate supports As federal policies shift to provide states and districts greater flexibility to craft their own evaluation systems Massachusetts offers an interesting model It has been less controversial because test scores serve as merely a check on the system rather than a driver of it In addition instead of using an algorithm to determine teacher effectiveness Massachusetts empowers school leaders to use their judgment to make these decisions By empowering evaluators and educators who are able to determine their own growth plans if they are high performing and embedding the evaluation system within a broader system of feedback and professional development the Massachusetts model supports continuous improvement of educators The Balance Sheet ,1978-12 Journal of Precision Teaching and Celeration ,2000 The Massachusetts Model System for Educator Evaluation Webinar ,2012 Comprehensive Dissertation Index ,1984 Index to American Doctoral Dissertations ,1986 Who's who in American Education ,1990 Journal of the ...
