Motivational Work The Motivational Relation:

Human Motivation and Interpersonal Relationships Netta Weinstein, 2014-07-08 This volume summarizes and organizes a growing body of research supporting the role of motivation in adaptive and rewarding interpersonal interactions with others. The field of human motivation is rapidly growing but most studies have focused on the effects of motivation on individuals' personal happiness and task engagement. Only recently have theorists and empiricists begun to recognize that dispositional and state motivations impact the ways individuals approach interpersonal interactions. In addition, researchers are now recognizing that the quality of interpersonal interactions influences consequent happiness and task engagement, thus helping to explain previous findings to this end. Similarly, social psychology and relationships researchers have focused on the impact of cognitions, emotions, and behaviors on people's relationships. In their work, relationships researchers demonstrate that both contextual characteristics and individual differences influence the quality of interactions. Many of these studies seek to understand which characteristics strengthen the bonds between people, encourage empathy and trust, and create a sense of well-being after a close interaction. This work seeks to integrate the field of human motivation and interpersonal relationships. Both fields have seen extensive growth in the past decade and each can contribute to the other. However, no single compiled work is available that targets both fields. This is the case in part because only now is there enough work to make a strong and compelling case for their integration. In the previous years, research has been conducted to show that motivation is relevant and important for interactions among strangers and in close relationships. In addition, developmental mechanisms for these relations are identified and mechanisms by which motivation strengthens people's relationships. Finally, recent work has demonstrated the many implications for interpersonal relationships, showing that motivation impacts a range of interpersonal processes from prejudice regulation and objectification of others to empathy and care. This book seeks to summarize and organize all these findings and present them in a way that is relevant to both motivation researchers and social and relationship researchers.

Motivational Work Per Revstedt, 2014-10-31 The book fills a vacuum in theory and method. Motivational work is an approach designed to help people who are considered to be unmotivated and hopeless. Most personnel contacts are based on the client/patient being motivated to some degree, i.e., that he or she wants to cooperate constructively and accept help. When you expect constructive cooperation from clients/patients, you only reach the group that is relatively functional. This leads to the motivation paradox: the clients/patients who have the greatest need of support receive the least. Motivational work tries to resolve this paradox so that those who are most in need actually receive help. Part two of Motivational Work is about the motivational relation. It includes a description of what this relation should include. It is emotional energy that the latently motivated person wants as a response to his contact/rebuses. As well as the motivational relation, there is also a demotivational relation. The motivational worker has an increasingly negative or indifferent attitude to the client. It is important that the motivational worker is aware of its existence and has the instruments to handle it so that it does not become stronger than the motivational relation The book describes different forms of motivational work Particularly important among these is motivational work with the organisation Since the latently motivated client does not seek help himself the motivational worker will generally be working in a bureaucratic organisation such as the social services healthcare or the correctional services For this reason he must also deal with the organisation s contact rebus The risk of being burned out is often greater from this rather than the client s contact rebus Motivational Work is suitable as course literature for social workers correctional workers treatment personnel in psychiatry hospital staff and police in other words for all categories of people who meet unmotivated clients in their work At the same time the book is aimed at academic education linked with psychology for example courses in psychology and medical training as well as economics and management programs Motivational work is a general psychological theory with which professionals should be familiar whenever they work a lot with people

The Oxford Handbook of Work Engagement, Motivation, and Self-Determination Theory Marylene Gagne PhD, 2014-06-09 Self determination theory is a theory of human motivation that is being increasingly used by organizations to make strategic HR decisions and train managers It argues for a focus on the quality of workers motivation over quantity Motivation that is based on meaning and interest is showed to be superior to motivation that is based on pressure and rewards Work environments that make workers feel competent autonomous and related to others foster the right type of motivation goals and work values The Oxford Handbook of Work Motivation Engagement and Self Determination Theory aims to give current and future organizational researchers ideas for future research using self determination theory as a framework and to give practitioners ideas on how to adjust their programs and practices using self determination theory principles The book brings together self determination theory experts and organizational psychology experts to talk about past and future applications of the theory to the field of organizational psychology The book covers a wide range of topics including how to bring about commitment engagement and passion in the workplace how to manage stress health emotions and violence at work how to encourage safe and sustainable behavior in organizations how factors like attachment styles self esteem person environment fit job design leadership compensation and training affect work motivation and how work related values and goals are forged by the work environment and affect work outcomes
