

During the forty years following the childhood described in this book, Maya Angelou studied dance in San Francisco and toured Europe and Africa for the State Department in Poetry and Peace. She taught dance in Rome and Tel Aviv. In collaboration with Geoffrey Cambridge, she produced, directed and starred in Cultural for Freedom at New York's Village Gate; she also starred in Gene's The Blacks at the St. Mark's Playhouse. At the request of the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Miss Angelou became the Northern Coordinator for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. From there she went to Africa, writing for newspapers in Cairo and Ghana. She has written and produced a ten-part TV series on the positive African issues in American life. She now lives in New York City.
