Handbook Keith Kirby, Jeanette Hall, 2019-05-02 How do you record the wildlife in a wood This book explains ways to record the flora and fauna found in woodland and outlines the sources you can use to find out more about the history and management of an area Whether you have just a few hours or a few years there are examples that you can follow to find out more about this important habitat Woods include some of the richest terrestrial wildlife sites in Britain but some are under threat and many are neglected such that they are not as rich as they might be If we are to protect them or increase their diversity we need first to know what species they contain how they have come to be as they are to understand how they fit into the wider landscape Conservation surveys are the bedrock on which subsequent protection and management action is based There is not one method that will be right for all situations and needs so the methods discussed range from what one can find out online to what can be seen on a general walk round a wood to the insights that can come from more detailed survey and monitoring approaches Fast evolving techniques such as eDNA surveys and the use of LiDAR are touched on

Woodland Development George Peterken, Edward Mountford, 2017-08-23 In 1944 Lady Park Wood 45 hectares of woodland in Gloucestershire and Monmouthshire UK was set aside indefinitely by the Forestry Commission so that ecologists could study how woodland develops naturally Since then in a unique long term study individual trees and shrubs have been recorded at intervals accumulating a detailed record of more than 20 000 individual beech sessile oak ash wych elm small leaved lime large leaved lime birch hazel yew and other species In the seven decades since the study started the wood has changed trees grew died and regenerated and drought disease and other events shaped its destiny Each tree and shrub species reacted in its own way to changes in the wood as a whole and to changes in the fortunes of its neighbours Meanwhile the wild fauna flora and fungi also responded leaving the wood richer in some groups but poorer in others In this landmark book beautifully illustrated throughout George Peterken and Edward Mountford summarise the ongoing results of the Lady Park Wood study highlighting its unique place in nature conservation and its significance to ecology in general It also builds on experience at Lady Park Wood and elsewhere to discuss in particular the role and maintenance of long term ecological studies the concept and form of natural woodland the role of minimum intervention policies in woodland nature conservation near to nature forestry and the desirability and practicalities of re wilding woodlands Nature 2015-2016 Weekly
