Drawing for Science Education Phyllis Katz, 2017-03-23 This book argues for the essential use of drawing as a tool for science teaching and learning. The authors are working in schools, universities, and continual science learning (CSL) settings around the world. They have written of their experiences using a variety of prompts to encourage people to take pen to paper and draw their thinking, sometimes direct observation and in other instances their memories. The result is a collection of research and essays that offer theory, techniques, outcomes, and models for the reader. Young children have provided evidence of the perceptions that they have accumulated from families and the media before they reach classrooms. Secondary students describe their ideas of chemistry and physics. Teacher educators use drawings to consider the progress of their undergraduates' understanding of science teaching and even their moral/ethical responses to teaching about climate change. Museum visitors have drawn their understanding of the physics of how exhibit sounds are transmitted. A physician explains how the history of drawing has been a critical tool to medical education and doctor/patient communications. Each chapter contains samples, insights, and where applicable, analysis techniques. The chapters in this book should be helpful to researchers and teachers alike across the teaching and learning continuum. The sections are divided by the kinds of activities for which drawing has historically been used in science education. An instance of observation: Audubon's Linnaeus. A process: how plants grow over time, what happens when chemicals combine. Conceptions of what science is and who does it. Images of identity development in science teaching and learning.

Evaluation Time Gail Vallance Barrington, Beverly Triana-Tremain, 2022-08-29 An accessible and comprehensive guide to the concepts and practice of evaluation, this book integrates new approaches and classic frameworks with practical tools that readers can use to design evaluation studies. From Mines and Wells to Well-Built Minds Bénédicte de la Brière, Deon Filmer, Dena Ringold, Dominic Rohner, Anastasiya Denisova, 2017-05-17 Sub-Saharan Africa's natural resource-rich countries have poor human development. Children in these countries are more likely to die before their first birthday, more likely to be stunted, and less likely to attend school than children in other countries with similar income. Despite the current price downturn, extractives will remain an important part of Sub-Saharan Africa's growth story, using resource rents wisely remains a long-term challenge. Governments must choose how to allocate resource rents between spending, investing in human or physical capital, or investing in global financial assets. The return to investing in physical and human capital will be high in countries where the capital stock is low. Moreover, higher levels of human capital make investments in physical capital more productive which suggests that the optimal portfolio will involve investing in both Human capital should be prioritized in many of Sub Saharan Africa s resource rich countries because of the low starting point Investing effectively in human capital is hard because it involves delivering services which means coordinating a large number of actors and activities Three dimensions of governance are key institutions incentives and information Decentralization and leveraging the private sector are entry points to reforming institutional structures Revenues from natural resources can fund financial incentives to strengthen performance or demand Producing information making it available and increasing social accountability helps citizens understand their rights and hold governments and providers accountable Improving the quality of education and health services is central to improving human capital Two additional areas are promising First early child development mother and newborn health and early child nutrition care and education improves outcomes in childhood and later on Second cash transfers either conditional or unconditional reduce poverty increase household investments in child education nutrition and health and increase the investment in productive assets which foster further income generation
