Jobs for the Boys Herbie Neil, 2015-02-11 Eric is not your average Careers Officer Not for him the discussions on the relative merits of a life in architecture versus civil engineering or ophthalmology versus physiotherapy Quite a few of his clients have already made a start on their careers in crime As to the others they range from boys who failed the selection test to be milkmen to a girl who wants to embalm corpses Eric loves it If only he could manage his own life better The only career that Eric would swap for would be that of an old blues guitarist but not being old or black or blind or from the Mississippi delta he is unqualified Nevertheless he plays his guitar when and where he can in the hope of attracting women He is marginally more adept at guitar than he is at women which is to say not very Dealing with women is his weakest point While he struggles to avoid the advances of a predatory older woman the girl he really wants keeps catching him in embarrassing situations Worse still Eric does nothing to encourage her when he stumbles upon a criminal conspiracy and foolishly decides to do the police s job for them Lurching from one disaster to another in his battered old motor he digs himself deeper and deeper in trouble with the police the criminals and most of all his would be girlfriend When he finally does dig himself out of trouble help comes from the most unlikely quarters
