This book revisits many aspects of current social science theories such as actor network theory and the French school of science and technology studies to test how the theories apply in a specific situation in this case after 1991 in the city of Cherepovets in Russia home of Russia's second biggest steel producer Severstal. Using political philosophy to analyse the down to earth details of the real technological problems facing the world the book examines the role of things and urban infrastructure in particular in political change. It considers how the city's infrastructure including housing ICT networks the provision of public utilities of all kinds has been transformed in recent years examines the roles of different actors including the municipal authorities and explores citizens differing and sometimes contradictory images of their city. It includes a great deal of new thinking on how communities are built how common action is initiated to provide public goods and how the goods themselves physical things are a crucial driver of community action and community building arguably more so than more abstract social and human forces.
