Numerical Development - From cognitive functions to neural underpinnings Korbinian Moeller, Elise Klein, Klaus F Willmes - von Hinckeldey, Karin Kucian, 2015-02-24 Living at the beginning of the 21st century requires being numerate because numerical abilities are not only essential for life prospects of individuals but also for economic interests of post industrial knowledge societies Thus numerical development is at the core of both individual as well as societal interests There is the notion that we are already born with a very basic ability to deal with small numerosities Yet this often called number sense seems to be very restricted approximate and driven by perceptual constraints During our numerical development in formal e g school but also informal contexts e g family street we acquire culturally developed abstract symbol systems to represent exact numerosities in particular number words and Arabic digits refining our numerical capabilities In recent years numerical development has gained increasing research interest documented in a growing number of behavioural neuro scientific educational cross cultural and neuropsychological studies addressing this issue Additionally our understanding of how numerical competencies develop has also benefitted considerably from the advent of different neuro imaging techniques allowing for an evaluation of developmental changes in the human brain In sum we are now starting to put together a more and more coherent picture of how numerical competencies develop and how this development is associated with neural changes as well In the end this knowledge might also lead to a better understanding of the reasons for atypical numerical development which often has grievous consequences for those who suffer from developmental dyscalculia or mathematics learning disabilities Therefore this Research Topic deals with all aspects of numerical development findings from behavioural performance to underlying neural substrates from cross sectional to longitudinal evaluations from healthy to clinical populations To this end we included empirical contributions using different experimental methodologies but also theoretical contributions review articles or opinion papers

Cybersecurity, Privacy and Data Protection in EU Law Maria Grazia Porcedda, 2023-03-23 Is it possible to achieve cybersecurity while safeguarding the fundamental rights to privacy and data protection Addressing this question is crucial for contemporary societies where network and information technologies have taken centre stage in all areas of communal life This timely book answers the question with a comprehensive approach that combines legal policy and technological perspectives to capture the essence of the relationship between cybersecurity privacy and data protection in EU law The book explores the values interconnections and tensions inherent to cybersecurity privacy and data protection within the EU constitutional architecture and its digital agendas The work's novel analysis looks at the interplay between digital policies instruments including the GDPR NIS Directive cybercrime legislation evidence and cyber diplomacy measures and technology as a regulatory object and implementing tool This original approach which factors in the connections between engineering principles and the layered configuration of fundamental rights outlines all possible combinations of the relationship between cybersecurity privacy and data protection in EU law from clash to complete reconciliation An essential read for scholars legal practitioners and policymakers alike the book demonstrates that reconciliation between cybersecurity privacy and data protection relies on explicit and brave political choices that require an active engagement with technology so as to preserve human flourishing autonomy and democracy American Men of Science ,1949 Sudden arrhythmic death: from basic science to clinical practice Gareth D. Matthews,2014-10-02 With upwards of 4 5 million deaths worldwide each year and more than one tenth of these occurring in those with no previously documented heart disease sudden arrhythmic death SAD is both a major public health burden and a highly emotive issue for society at large Recent years have witnessed a marked expansion in our knowledge of the physiology underlying SAD both in the context of hereditary and acquired cardiac disorders Thanks largely to work in genetically modified animals the growth in our understanding of mechanisms underlying arrhythmia in the hereditary channelopathies has been particularly marked Our growing knowledge of the fundamental mechanisms underlying SAD has so far failed to spur substantial developments in clinical practice Despite a large body of work in both humans and animals it remains impossible to confidently identify those at high risk of SAD making pre emptive therapy a challenge What is more with the thankful exception of the implantable cardioverter defibrillators and pharmacological agents in very specific situations there has been depressingly little progress in finding new and effective therapies This Research Topic aims to go some way towards bridging the gap between advances in basic science and the development and delivery of new therapies It brings together original research contributions and review articles from key opinion leaders in the field focusing on the direct clinical implications of the basic science research now and in the future Fundamentals of Management with Online Study Tools 12 Months Danny Samson,Richard L.
