The SportsBusiness Journal Study, 1999

In 1999, a 1994 study was conducted. This one was done by the SportsBusiness Journal (SBJ). This study estimated the size of the industry to be $214 billion ("The Numbers," 1999). This study was widely cited during that period of time and unfortunately became the label of the size of the industry. This label was wrong because the SportsBusiness Journal study did not include the whole of the sports business industry—it was highly selective and included only four main professional sports leagues and some of the businesses associated with operating those professional sports. Additionally, at that time it was determined that this study showed the value reported was "twice the size of the press industry and seven times the size of the movie industry" (Adams, 2004). While it would be fair to say that the true pieces of the industry could be determined to be larger than the movie industry and the music industry at that time, it was not accurate to claim that the study was showing the size of the whole industry.

Tables 1.10 and 1.11 show the information from the SBJ study. Table 1.10 shows the rankings of industries, with the sports business industry appearing as the fifth largest industry. Table 1.11 shows the segments of the industry that were included in the SBJ study. It is important to point out that although this study was limited to a very small part of the industry—four main professional sports leagues—the economic size reported placed it in 5th place among the largest industries in the U.S.

When you compare this study to the previous studies, you can see that the SBJ study included the broadest segment of the industry. Their study was limited to organized sports that they defined as "professional sports" and their related industries.

Table 1.10. The SportsBusiness Journal Study—Rank of Industry

Industry	Value
1. Real Estate	$600 billion
2. Retail Trade	$270 billion
3. Health Care	$260 billion

5. Transportation	$230 billion
6. SERVICES (includes)	$214 billion
7. Communications	$210 billion
8. Public Utilities	$210 billion
9. Agriculture	$130 billion
10. Mining	$120 billion
11. Motor vehicles and equipment	$80 billion
