The Impact of Systems Medicine on Human Health and Disease Adil Mardinoglu,Jens Nielsen,2017-03-24 Complex disorders including obesity diabetes fatty liver disease cardiovascular disease and cancer are results from a combination of genetic environmental and lifestyle factors The prevalence of such disorders has increased dramatically in the last two decades and there is an urgent need for the development of new prognostic tools for the treatment of such diseases However this requires a deep understanding of the underlying molecular mechanisms involved in the occurrence of the diseases With the advances in high throughput technologies biological components of cells can be measured with a very high resolution and these data can be used for investigating whole systems properties using a network based approach Systems medicine provides an integrative platform for studying the interactions between the biological components of the cell using a holistic approach and generating mechanistic explanations for the emergent systems properties This inter disciplinary field of study allows for understanding biological processes of cells in health and disease states gaining new insights into what drives the appearance of the disease and finally identifying proteins and metabolites implicated in human disease Systems medicine utilizes mathematical approaches to generate models which can be employed for designing new sets of experiments and for mapping the response of the system to perturbations quantitatively These models as well as the developed tools can accelerate the emergence of personalized medicine which can transform the practice of medicine and offer better targets for drug development with minimum side effects

Perceptual, Social, and Cognitive Development Klaus Libertus,Petra Hauf,2017-05-18 Motor skills are a vital part of healthy development and are featured prominently both in physical examinations and in parents baby diaries It has been known for a long time that motor development is critical for children s understanding of the physical and social world Learning occurs through dynamic interactions and exchanges with the physical and the social world and consequently movements of eyes and head arms and legs and the entire body are a critical during learning At birth we start with relatively poorly developed motor skills but soon gain eye and head control learn to reach grasp sit and eventually to crawl and walk on our own The opportunities arising from each of these motor milestones are profound and open new and exciting possibilities for exploration and interactions and learning Consequently several theoretical accounts of child development suggest that growth in cognitive social and perceptual domains are influenced by infants own motor experiences Recently empirical studies have started to unravel the direct impact that motor skills may have on other domains of development This volume is part of this renewed interest and includes reviews of previous findings and recent empirical evidence for associations between the motor domain and other domains from leading researchers in the field of child development We hope that these articles will stimulate further research on this interesting question The Cellular Stress Response and Physiological
