Jamaica has long been a multicultural, multiethnic nation, with considerable diversity in language, race, and religion. Several generations of the immigrant population have helped shape the nation's heritage. While the United Kingdom is the dominant source of the Caribbean population, many immigrants come from other countries, including India, China, and the United States. The country's diverse population has created a rich cultural heritage, with many different languages, religions, and customs. The country's diverse population has also helped to create a strong sense of national identity and pride.
