Les Migrations Intérieures En Chine Le Système Du Hukou:

Les migrations intérieures en Chine Jing Wang, 2012-07-01 Les migrations intérieures en Chine sont régies par le système de Hukou. La ville d'accueil se sert du Hukou grâce à la migration permanente pour attirer les facteurs de production dont elle a besoin : capital et travail qualifié. Elle peut aussi bénéficier de main-d'œuvre de moindre coût sans assumer les coûts sociaux de migrants temporaires. La Chine a retiré des gains considérables de ce système spécifique d'enregistrement de population, mais dont le maintien s'avère aujourd'hui coûteux. China's Hukou System Jason Young, 2013-06-03 By 2010, 260 million citizens were living outside of their permanent hukou location, a major challenge to the constrictive Mao era system of migration and settlement planning. Jason Young shows how these new forces have been received by the state and documents the process of change and the importance of China's hukou system. The Effect of China Hukou System on Internal Migration Dongyang He, 2019 Hukou system has played an important role in controlling and regulating internal migration in China, especially rural-urban migration. Since it was introduced in the 1950s, it has undergone various reforms in response to the changing situations. While the increase of migration rate since the 1980s is obvious, besides hukou reforms, there are many other factors that can contribute to the increase, such as economic development or increasing urban labor demand. As a result, the increasing migration rate does not necessarily imply the restrictive effect of hukou on migration is weakening. In this paper, I estimate the change of migration friction between 2000 and 2015 to answer a central question: How much do hukou reforms improve migrants' welfare and reduce migration friction? I begin the discussion by first providing a brief review of the history of hukou, with a focus on the social and economic context of major hukou reforms. With province-level data in 2000, 2005, 2010, and 2015, I then estimate the change of migration friction over the recent years using a spatial equilibrium model. I found that migration friction across almost all provinces in 2005, 2010, and 2015 is below 2000 level. In particular, compared to urban migrants, rural migrants experienced a larger decrease in migration friction between 2000 and 2015. Further analysis indicates that recent major hukou reforms have limited impact on the change of migration friction, and many other factors, such as rising housing prices, may have contributed to the change of migration friction as well. Hukou System and Migration in China Ziyu Guo, 2014 This project involves discovering how the hukou system affects the migration and the equality in China. With the results from the three models as well as the comparison between the data from the different groups, this research confirms the existing of the education gap and income gap among rural residents, urban residents, and the rural-to-urban migrants; however, the difference of schooling years decreased over the years. In addition, when converting the nominal income into the real income with house price index, there shows no significant difference between the rural and urban hukou holders. Moreover, the average self-reported social level of the rural residents is higher than that of the urban ones, which indicates that, on average, people in rural areas are more satisfied with their life status. The results also show the hukou system has the filter effects on the rural hukou holders: people with higher education background are more likely to convert their hukou type to the urban ones Although this effects might result in the brain drain of the rural areas it may in fact ends up to encourage the efforts of individuals to go ahead and benefit society in the whole

Handbook of Chinese Migration Robyn R. Iredale, Fei Guo, 2015-12-18 The recent unprecedented scale of Chinese migration has had far reaching consequences Within China many villages have been drained of their young and most able workers cities have been swamped by the floating population and many rural migrants have been unable to integrate into urban society Internationally the Chinese have become increasingly more mobile This Handbook provides a unique collection of new and original research on internal and international Chinese migration and its effects on the sense of belonging of migrants

The Regulation of Migration in a Transition Economy Shuming Bao, Orn B. Bodvarsson, Jack W Hou, Yaohui Zhao, 2011 Unlike most countries China regulates internal migration Access to public schools health services low cost housing and attractive jobs by those who do not have local registration Hukou is often limited Coincident with the deepening of economic reforms Hukou has gradually been relaxed since the 1980s contributing to a migration surge In this study of interprovincial Chinese migration we address two questions First what is a sensible way of incorporating Hukou into theoretical and empirical models of migration in China Second to what extent has Hukou influenced the scale and structure of migration We incorporate two different measures of Hukou into a modified gravity model nuanced to fit the Chinese case 1 the migrant s perceived probability of securing Hukou and 2 the perceived joint probability of securing Hukou and a job available only to a registered person Our tests include a much wider variety of controls especially important for the Chinese case Using census data for 1985 90 1995 2000 and 2000 05 we find that migration is very sensitive to Hukou with the greatest sensitivity occurring during the middle period
