Elementary School Teachers' Mathematics Instructional Decision Making in the Context of District Mandates on Instruction Heather Anne Martin,2008 In the current educational climate teachers in low performing schools are experiencing pressure from state and district policy makers to raise student performance on state tests Some district administrations have undertaken various measures including implementing numerous and specific mathematics content standards adopting particular curricular packages and requiring teachers to use them as their primary instructional materials and even creating pacing guides with uniform timelines for presenting lessons to students These efforts have had the cumulative effect of urging teachers to stick closely to a standard curriculum in order to raise student test scores Teachers must also interpret and attend to the needs of their students and ideally teach their students to understand mathematical concepts and processes as opposed to narrowly mastering procedural skills It may not always be possible to both follow administrative mandates about instruction and meet student needs and teachers may have to make a compromise between these two objectives In this study I examined how elementary school teachers in a particular accountability pressured school decided to teach mathematics Drawing on multiple interviews and ten classroom observations per teacher I created portraits of the mathematics instructional choices of four second grade teachers including their use of instructional materials such as textbooks I drew on an analytical framework adapted from Stein Grover and Henningsen 1996 to assess various features of the lesson in order to note the interaction between the materials and the teachers decisions about how to use them I developed a lesson signature for each teacher a visual representation of the typical organization of the teacher s lessons and how materials were used within them My findings indicated that the teachers individual goals for their teaching beliefs about their students needs and interpretations of the district s curricular mandates interacted to steer their instructional choices to very different results Two of the teachers dutifully followed the textbook while two essentially disregarded it in favor of other materials Teachers own senses of their autonomy to make curricular decisions and their support for their students autonomy in learning math emerged as important factors I suggest implications for teacher professional development and curricular materials development

Always Becoming, Never Arriving David J. Mulder, 2024-12-19 Does Jesus care how I arrange the desks in my classroom How I evaluate student work The way I interact with students and colleagues What if all these small moment by moment classroom decisions a Christian teacher makes are actually the evidence of living discipleship Teaching Christianly does not just happen it is the result of deliberate choices to work toward shrinking the gap between what we say we believe and what we actually do in our teaching This book is an exploration of the teaching profession through the lens of living out our calling through teaching as discipleship Whether you are new to the profession or a seasoned veteran you will find ideas to expand your imagination about what teaching Christianly looks like considering topics that run the range from professionalism and ethics to a biblical view of learners and learning to content knowledge and curriculum to planning instruction and assessment Teaching Christianly is a journey a process of growing as a more faithful disciple and more closely following Jesus day by day Learning to teach Christianly is an adventure of always becoming and never arriving until that day when we meet the Lord face to face Welcome to the adventure
