detective novel by the 19th century French writer mile Gaboriau in his Monsieur Lecoq series The Mystery of Orcival Émile Gaboriau, 2019-07-12T20:20:02Z A murder is discovered The authorities quickly arrest an obvious suspect A detective spends hours at the scene in disguise before making himself known and proceeds to minutely examine the evidence with the assistance of a doctor among others before proclaiming the answer lies in a completely different direction One would be forgiven for thinking the detective must be a certain famous Englishman and his doctor companion But this detective is French rather than English a professional working for the police rather than an amateur and indulges in candy lozenges rather than cocaine If there is a straight line between Poe's Dupin and Doyle's Holmes then Gaboriau's Lecog lies right in the middle of it He is a master of disguise he is proud and sometimes arrogant he notices infinitesimal things others do not he makes great leaps in deduction while others are struggling to take small steps. He is both strikingly similar and distinctly different than his more famous English cousin Although Monsieur Lecoq appeared in Gaboriau s first novel there he played only a minor part Here he is the main attraction Solving the murder of a countess and disappearance of a count requires all of Lecoq's skills and as he steadily unravels the mystery one sees the debt that is owed by all who came after him This book is part of the Standard Ebooks project which produces free public domain ebooks The Literary Digest International Book The Influence of Edgar Allan Poe in France Célestin Pierre Cambiaire, 1927 Review Clifford Smyth, 1923 The Fortnightly Review ,1882 The Fortnightly ,1882 Catalogue of the London library.
