Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the physical fitness of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were 15 men, aged 40 to 50 years, who were sedentary and had no cardiovascular or respiratory disease. They were randomly assigned to a 10-week training program or a control group. The training program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions included aerobic exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The control group did not exercise. Physical fitness was measured at the beginning and end of the 10-week period. The results showed that the training program significantly improved the physical fitness of the subjects. The subjects in the training group showed significant improvements in cardiovascular fitness, strength, and flexibility compared to the control group. The improvements in cardiovascular fitness were reflected in a decrease in heart rate and an increase in maximal oxygen consumption. The improvements in strength were reflected in an increase in muscle strength. The improvements in flexibility were reflected in an increase in range of motion. The results of this study suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the physical fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

Stato di un'attività economica, in cui almeno un individuo ha controllo (proprio personale o grazie ad un'altra intermediazione) su almeno un fattore produttivo (come lavoro o capitale o tecnologia), mentre la sua parte di questo fattore produttivo è distribuita fra lui e altri individui del paese, e almeno uno di questi individui non è il proprietario di questo fattore produttivo. La distribuzione di questo fattore produttivo è detta "distribuzione del reddito".
